Rep. Alexander Pirnie of New York, a Republican member of the House Armed Services Committee, started it all off by putting his blue-sleeved arm into the jar.

A Selective Service employee, seated at a desk in front of a room crowded with television lights and cameras, took a blue capsule from Rep. Pirnie and twisted it open. The slip of paper inside bore the date Sept. 14.

For the next two hours the decision on who shall serve was decided by the luck of the draw.

The birth dates were pasted on a raspberry and blue board entitled Random Selection Sequence. After all 366 dates were posted—one for leap year men born on Feb. 29—the 26 letters of the alphabet were drawn the same way and posted on a separate board.

Rep. Pirnie himself was born on April 16. If he were between 18 1/2 and 26 years old—and healthy—he would rank 148th on the vulnerability list of 366 birth dates. He would be tenth in vulnerability among those born on that date because the letter P was the tenth letter drawn.

Even if the draft board got down to a man's date in trying to fill its quota of men in calendar 1970, he could put off induction if he had a college deferment. But his name would be put at the top of the board's list after he graduated.

Nixon Warns of Tax Bill Veto If Exemption Is Set Too High

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP).—President Nixon said today that the amendments of Sen. Albert Gore, D., Tenn., to raise the personal income tax exemption to $800 or $1,000 do not meet the test of fiscal responsibility. He said he could not sign a bill containing either of them.

The President raised this clear veto threat in a letter to Sen. Hugh Scott, R., Pa., the Senate Republican leader, as the Senate debated Sen. Gore's proposals. A vote was expected later today.

The letter was made public both at the White House and at the Capitol.

The Gore amendment containing the $1,000 exemption, a $400 increase over present law, would cost $14.8 billion in annual revenue or $5.3 billion more than the tax relief the administration supports.

The package with an $800 exemption would cost $9 billion, the figure the administration accepts.

However, it has made clear it opposes this amendment because it would grant the relief much earlier than the bill which passed the House and cleared the Senate Finance Committee.

"The proposed amendments," Mr. Nixon said, "would substitute imbalanced inequitable relief for the committee's even-handed tax rate reductions in all income brackets."

Republican Compromise

Senate Republican leaders meanwhile sought to work out a compromise proposal which can win both White House approval and enough Democratic support to be passed.

It is expected to include a limited increase in the personal exemption and some other changes for inclusion in the tax reform bill.

A cut to 23 percent in the oil depletion allowance was written into the bill yesterday.

The Republican compromise proposal, to be sponsored by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R., Ill., would be proposed as a substitute for the Gore amendment, to raise the personal income tax exemption from $600 to $1,000 for each dependent in four yearly steps.

Sen. Scott said Republicans hope the Percy plan—still being drafted as the Senate resumed its tax debate—will win administration endorsement.

He said it would involve an increase to $700 or $750 in the personal exemption, with adjustment in income tax rates as well. Sen. Scott said estimates of the revenue cost are being prepared now. He said the White House has taken no position on the GOP plan, but it is obvious the administration would prefer it to the Gore measure.

House Backs Nixon, 333-55, On Vietnam Peace Policy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—The House, in its first Southeast Asian policy statement since the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, gave a thumping endorsement today to President Nixon's Vietnam negotiating efforts.

The vote was 333 to 55.

Members adopted a bipartisan resolution affirming the House's "support for the President in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam" and approving his goal of free elections in South Vietnam, open to all and internationally supervised.

Just before passage, members accepted, 382 to 0, an amendment by the Republican leadership that requests Mr. Nixon "to continue to press the government of North Vietnam to abide by the Geneva Convention of 1949 in the treatment of prisoners of war."

Although conceived by Democrats, the resolution was quickly embraced by the Nixon administration.

Leaders of both parties said it could help dispel the impression, from well publicized protests, that many Americans are not behind Mr. Nixon's Vietnam policy.

But critics complained that the show of unity was artificially forged through steamroller tactics—whisked through the Foreign Affairs Committee without hearings and sent to the floor under a procedure prohibiting any meaningful amendments.

Critics of the war feared that President Nixon might decide that the quickest way to peace was by enlarging the war. They noted that he had said that if the other side stepped up the war, the United States would take steps to cope with the situation.

They wanted to offer amendments clarifying the meaning of the resolution and to make other changes, such as supporting rapid troop withdrawals. But they lost, 225 to 132.

Nixon to Attend Big Arkansas Football Game

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—President Nixon accepted today an invitation to attend the big college game of 1969—the showdown between Texas and Arkansas this Saturday.

Press Secretary Ron Ziegler announced Mr. Nixon would fly to Fayetteville, Ark., Saturday morning.

The President, an avid sports fan, was invited to watch the battle between the two unbeaten, bowl-bound teams by John Mooney, sports editor of the Salt Lake City Tribune who is president of the Football Writers Association of America.

EEC to Begin Talks With U.K. by June 30

Compromise Saves Face For France

By Jonathan C. Randal

THE HAGUE, Dec. 2 (WP).—The six-nation European Common Market summit meeting ended in compromise today as France finally agreed to let Britain renegotiate for long-blocked membership by June 30, 1970, at the latest.

In a face-saving gesture to France, which under former President Charles de Gaulle twice in six years vetoed British entry, the official communiqué made no specific mention of the deadline.

Instead the commitment to start negotiations to expand the 12-year-old Common Market was spelled out in separate oral statements by the founding members — France, Germany, Italy, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

French President Georges Pompidou, who called the summit to get the long-deadlocked European grouping moving again, pledged his government would not seek to hold up preparatory work by the Common Market experts to fix a joint negotiating position.

If Britain and the three other smaller candidates—Ireland, Norway and Denmark—are accepted as members, the Common Market will count 360 million citizens and benefit from Britain's technology.

The basis for the compromise was formal agreement by France's partners to perpetuate the principle of the costly farm finance system which annually provides hundreds of millions of dollars of Common Market subsidies to French farmers.

Reflecting general satisfaction with the compromise, French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann said: "From both a French and European viewpoint the results of the conference are a total success."

"If Britain sincerely wants to join the Six," he added, alluding to lukewarm British interest in joining the Common Market, "then it is reasonable to believe she will succeed in doing so."

Dutch Foreign Minister Josef Luns, who steadfastly led the fight for British entry against Gaullist opposition, said: "I think we may be rather happy with the results." German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel said the summit was "a great success, exceeding the German public's expectations."

EEC Seeking to Establish Own Monetary Reserve Fund

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

THE HAGUE, Dec. 2 (NYT).—Shaken by repeated currency crises over the last two years, the political leaders of the European Economic Community agreed today to work toward establishing a mini-Federal Reserve system as part of a general program of closer monetary cooperation.

They acted at a summit conference at which both French President Georges Pompidou and German Chancellor Willy Brandt declared that their governments were ready to set up the cooperative machinery necessary to ward off future crises.

The agreement of the two major EEC powers on this vital question, which only a year ago was a divisive issue, could bring about a new cohesiveness that would invigorate the community in the 1970s.

Both Mr. Brandt and Mr. Pompidou said it was necessary to create a European reserve fund in which countries would transfer a portion of their national reserves for joint administration.

Members would have the right to borrow from the common reserves to tide them over balance of payments difficulties.

At the same time, they would agree on common economic targets to iron out the variations of performance that have been behind the recent currency strife.

The ideas are not new. The executive commission of the EEC has had a somewhat similar proposal on the table since last February, which finance ministers have looked on with favor.

What is new is that the two dominant EEC governments are now committed at the highest levels to follow the ideas through.

Machinery Set

The other four heads of government joined in the commitment, which took up a paragraph in the final communiqué.

Mr. Pompidou, in a monetary policy statement today, proposed establishment of a new community institution with a small secretariat to push the idea forward.

Meanwhile, he said, finance min...

N. Korea About to Release 3 GIs Held Since August

SEOUL, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Three American soldiers captured by North Korea after their helicopter was shot down after straying across the truce line Aug. 17 will be released at Panmunjom Wednesday, Dec. 3, the U.S. Army said today.

North Korea has demanded an apology for the intrusion in exchange for the men's release.

The Army announcement said the three men, Capt. David H. Crawford, Warrant Officer Malcolm V. Lopeke and Spec. 4 Herman E. Hofstatter, would be released tomorrow before noon.

Information furnished later by the North Koreans said Spec. Hofstatter and Capt. Crawford were severely injured in the crash while Warrant Officer Lopeke suffered minor injuries. They said all three were getting good care.

The disclosure that the men's release was expected tomorrow was similar to the word of the release of the 82 crewmen of the Pueblo, which was given one day before they were freed last Dec. 22. The Pueblo was seized by North Korean gunboats in January, 1968.

Rogers Says U.S. Will Keep NATO Forces

BRUSSELS, Dec. 2 (AP).—Two American statesmen tonight flew into Brussels for North Atlantic alliance talks on European security and pledged the United States will go on maintaining substantial forces in Europe.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers told newsmen, "My government plans to continue to maintain substantial forces in Europe and the Mediterranean." But he also reaffirmed the American commitment to search for "acceptable solutions to the real issues that divide East and West." This was a reference to the current Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Helsinki.

Mr. Rogers's statement underlined a declaration in Washington yesterday by his press officer, Carl Bartch, that the United States had no intention of reducing its strength in Europe before June 30, 1972.

Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, who arrived minutes before Mr. Rogers, reiterated that President Nixon's administration will continue resisting congressional pressures for a cutback of American troops in Europe—at least until mid-1972. He declared:

"The President will recommend (to Congress) substantially the same troop commitment in Europe for 1971 as he did for 1970."

"We will always make economies where they can be made without affecting the combat strength and combat readiness of our forces," Mr. Laird said in an evident bid to allay European fears.

"We are hoping the European countries also will make further contributions to the security of NATO."

The three-day conference of NATO leaders begins tomorrow with a secret session of defense ministers who are due to approve guidelines for military field commanders governing the use of tactical nuclear weapons in case of any big attack from the East.

Foreign ministers will confer Thursday and Friday on the sort of responses the allies should make to the continuing demands of Soviet bloc countries for a conference on European security to be held within the next seven months.

Big Four Resume Talks on Mideast

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. 2 (AP).—Amid some expressions of pessimism, the UN representatives of the Big Four today resumed their private diplomatic efforts to bring peace to the Middle East.

Lord Caradon, of Britain, Armand Bérard of France and Jacob A. Malik, of the Soviet Union met this afternoon at the Waldorf Towers apartment of U.S. Ambassador Charles W. Yost for their first Middle East session since July.

Nomadic Hippie Cult Suspected in Ritual Tate Murders

By Jerry Cohen

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—Police believe they have solved the Sharon Tate murder case and that an occult band of hippies, directed by a leader who calls himself "Jesus," committed the crime.

Members of the band, a mystical, hate-oriented tribe of 20th-century nomads, also are suspected of stabbing to death Leno and Rosemary Labianca—a case known here as the "copycat killings"—and at least four other comparably grotesque butcheries.

The suspects slew their victims, police believe, both to "punish" them for their affluent life style and to "liberate" them from it.

The killers zeroed in on the Tate and Labianca households, it is suspected, because they learned about the victims' affluence through friends or relatives of those slain.

Police have found no evidence of association between the suspects and the victims prior to the murders.

AP.

Charles D. Watson

The alleged cult leader, Charles Manson, 34, who also refers to himself as both "God" and "Satan," was in custody today.

Another man and two young women also have been arrested. A third young woman is being sought out-of-state, but her whereabouts are believed known.

At least five other women are being held here as material witnesses.

All are members of Mr. Manson's "family," as the tribe calls itself. They reportedly consider themselves his "slaves," willing to do his bidding without question.

Eerie Story

Police got their break about two weeks ago when a young woman member of the outlaw hippie clan poured out an eerie story of mass murder and sadistic sexual gratification to an informer.

The young woman reportedly confided that the Tate and Labianca killers were members of the cult which considered itself above the law and divinely guided.

She recounted details of the Tate murder scene which, in the judgment of police, only the killers could have known.

She supplied nicknames, aliases, first names and a few entire names which the informant passed along to detectives. These led officers to the last known stronghold of the nomadic tribe in Death Valley.

AP.

Patricia Krenwinkel

Before Miss Tate was killed, the informant told police, she pleaded to be spared, saying, "Let me have my baby." She was eight-and-a-half months pregnant at the time.

At a press conference yesterday, Police Chief Edward M. Davis released fragmentary details about what possibly has become the most celebrated murder investigation in California history.

He revealed that murder complaints had been issued for three of the suspects, none of them Mr. Manson, and said:

"It is anticipated that an additional four or five persons will be named in indictments which will be sought from the Los Angeles County Grand Jury."

However, it is known that police believe only five persons—two men and three young women—actively participated in the Aug. 9 slaughter of Miss Tate and four others at the actress's rented estate in a posh Benedict Canyon neighborhood.

Taken into custody yesterday, Charles (Tex) Watson, alias Charles Montgomery, 24, is being held in McKinney, Texas, on an unrelated charge. However, he was accused, in the

Millions Expended, Says Fulbright

Pentagon 'Propaganda' Criticized

By Warren Weaver Jr.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (NYT).—Sen. J. William Fulbright, D., Ark., charged yesterday that the Defense Department is spending millions of dollars on "public relations" programs that promote military activity rather than merely furnish information about it.

Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he would move to strike from the defense appropriation bill all financing for five television camera crews working in Vietnam and producing films with "a propaganda rather than a journalistic thrust."

"It is one thing," he said in a floor speech, "for the Defense Department to have employees available to provide—quickly and responsively—factual information for both the public and the press, upon request.

"It is quite another when that department and the individual military services use taxpayers' money to generate and promote public support for military weapons and military programs."

Sen. Fulbright said conservative estimates indicated that the Pentagon is now spending $27.9 million for public relations, compared to $2.8 million ten years ago. He said he thought "the real total figure is much larger."

Yesterday's was the first of four speeches the senator will give this week on the public-relations activities of the military. In the others he will discuss specifically promotional activities of the Navy, Air Force and Army.

Sen. Fulbright indicated that he would move to impose a dollar ceiling on Pentagon public-relations spending.

In response, the assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, Daniel Z. Henkin, said he was operating on instructions from Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird that "propaganda has no place in the Defense Department public information program."

Promising that the department would give the Fulbright speeches "careful study," Mr. Henkin said the television crews in Vietnam were "an experiment" that would be reviewed for its effectiveness.

Mr. Henkin said he had already cut the $3.7 million budget of his own public affairs office by $338,000 this year.

Sen. Fulbright singled out these aspects of Defense Department public-relations work for what he called "special concern":

● Cross-country tours for selected community leaders to a variety of defense installations, by which "the Defense Department is able to propagandize and influence attitudes toward their activities."

● A program of providing military leaders as speakers for public meetings. He noted that Gen. William C. Westmoreland had made 59 such appearances from August, 1968, to May, 1969, "quite a schedule for a professional soldier whose mission was to act as Chief of Staff of the Army."

● Production of films made available to the public on subjects like Vietnam and Communism "which in order to support the administration or the military establishment's point of view at the time usually distort key facts."

As for the Pentagon camera crews in Vietnam, Sen. Fulbright questioned the justification or legal authority for the Defense Department's producing news films on what it called "feature aspects of the military participation in Southeast Asia."

"Perhaps Vice-President Agnew, who last week appealed to the networks to put on different commentators, has not felt the necessity to complain about the TV coverage from Vietnam because he knows that at least a portion of it was emanating directly from administration sources in Vietnam," Sen. Fulbright said.

He concluded that "there is enough administration propaganda on Vietnam being provided the American public through speeches and statements, without providing this additional outlet in the guise of 'objective' news-film stories."

5 Against God

NEW DELHI, Dec. 2 (UP).—The question of whether God exists arose in the Indian Parliament yesterday when an opposition member objected to judicial oaths in the name of God. Voting on his motion that jurists and witnesses be made only to affirm instead of swear, 110 members were for God and only five against.

50 Are Killed as Fire Razes Nursing Home in Quebec

NOTRE DAME DU LAC, Quebec, Dec. 2 (UPI).—More than 50 elderly, bedridden people were killed early today when fire razed through a wooden nursing home. Twenty others were injured.

Police said 75 people were in the building when the fire broke out.

"Most of them were trapped in their beds and didn't have a chance," a police spokesman said. "It's going to be some time before we can get the bodies out of there."

Two other buildings in addition to the nursing home, the Repos du Vieillard, were destroyed in the blaze.

The injured were taken to a nearby hospital in this papermill community of 4,000 about 50 miles south of Riviere du Loup on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

The town is 250 miles northeast of Montreal.

Most of the dead were trapped on the upper two levels of the three-story structure and died before the town's 30-man volunteer fire-fighting force could be mustered.

The flames from the rest home spread quickly to two nearby buildings, a residence and a general store. They were razed by the time the nearest regular fire-fighting force arrived from Cabano, Quebec, six miles away.

Among the survivors was Artemis Tardif, the owner of the rest home, who, police said, was "about 80 to 85 years old." Mr. Tardif lived in one of several apartments on the first floor of the building.

The upper two floors were reserved for the patients, who were cared for by "one or two doctors and a couple of nuns," police said.

Police from nearby communities were called in to help the town's ten-man police force begin their search for victims among the smouldering ruins.

"There wasn't much anyone could do except wait until the fire burned itself out," a police spokesman said.

EEC Agrees On 1970 Talks With Britain

Negotiations Due To Begin by June 30

compromises after unbudging initial positions, Mr. Pompidou kept repeating yesterday's firm refusal to agree on a negotiating date—in any form—until an arduous working lunch.

Pressed hard by his partners, grown wary over the years at French procrastination, Mr. Pompidou finally accepted the oral-statement compromise.

But such is the heritage of mutual mistrust among Common Market countries that the other five heads of state obliged Mr. Pompidou to insert in the official communiqué his own words of vague optimism delivered at the morning summit session.

The key Pompidou phrase in the communiqué said the six nations "agreed that the essential preparatory work could be undertaken as soon as practically and conveniently possible; by common consent the preparations would take place in a most positive spirit."

The French leader's refusal to be pinned down in the formal communiqué was apparently dictated by fears of outraging vocal Gaullist diehards still adamantly opposed to British entry on any terms.

The Wedge

But the other five nations were satisfied that France could be trusted if only because they can still hold up formal parliamentary ratification of the farm finance system were the entry negotiations unduly delayed.

The lifting of the long Gaullist veto against British entry reflected the marked decline of French influence now that Gen. de Gaulle has been forced into retirement and France has lost its gold hoard.

Indeed, quite apart from the compromise on British entry which France fought no longer on doctrinal but on bread-and-butter issues, the most striking note of the summit was the emergence of Germany as the Common Market's most dynamic political as well as economic force.

In their first major international outing since taking office earlier this year, German Chancellor Willy Brandt clearly outclassed Mr. Pompidou and showed that Germany was no longer spellbound with Gaullist tactics.

Beyond such immediate considerations, the summit held out the hope that an expanded and revivified Common Market could move ahead and fulfill its former hopes of leading to political and economic unity.

Significantly, both France and Germany were instrumental in inserting in the communiqué support for economic and monetary reform—including a Common Market Reserve Fund—which long has been an expert's dream.

The lack of common currency has created two major crises within the Common Market this year and contributed to preventing the six-nation organization from progressing beyond a mere customs union.

The Communiqué

THE HAGUE, Dec. 2 (UPI).—The passage of the communiqué referring to admission of the four countries said the six member nations "reaffirmed their agreement on the principle of broadening of the community, as is foreseen in Article 237 of the Treaty of Rome."

"Insofar as the applicant states accept the treaties and their political finality, the decisions reached since the entry into force of the treaties, and the options taken in the field of development, the heads of state and government noted their agreement on opening of negotiations between the community on the one hand and the applicant states on the other."

The communiqué continued: "They agreed that the preparatory work indispensable for establishment of a common basis for negotiation can take place in the most convenient and most rapid period of time. These preparations, it was jointly agreed, will be carried on in the most positive spirit."

The communiqué contained these other main points:

● The summit leaders noted that the six-nation community now is entering its final, definitive phase. They reaffirmed their determination to carry out to the end the task of completing the community.

● They agreed to draw up definitive financial arrangements for the market's farm policy after the end of this year. They agreed to continue efforts by the Common Market Council of Ministers to cut down the present huge farm produce surpluses.

● They agreed to push ahead with development of an economic union among market members. This would include setting up a European Reserve Fund.

● They agreed to push ahead with technological cooperation.

● They agreed to draw up a joint program for nuclear research.

MEDIC AT MY LAI—This picture, obtained by the Chicago Tribune from a former member of the U.S. 11th Infantry Brigade, is reported to show a medic attending a GI with a foot wound. The paper said it was the only U.S. casualty in the My Lai operation. The GI reportedly shot himself in order to avoid carrying out orders. In the background (center) the company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, radioes a call for a medical evacuation helicopter, the Tribune said.

Lawyer Says Hanoi Officer Was Captured at My Lai

By Peter Kihss

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT).—A "North Vietnamese Army area commander" was captured during the controversial American attack on My Lai village in South Vietnam and admitted his identity after a confrontation with Capt. Ernest L. Medina, the captain's civilian lawyer said yesterday.

F. Lee Bailey, the lawyer, reached in Columbus, Ohio, by telephone, said the captain had been told that "this guy knew something which might be very important." So the man was put up against a tree, Mr. Bailey said, explaining:

"Medina said he was a very good shot with a rifle. He fired a shot two inches above his head into the tree from a distance of 15 feet. He fired it again.

"Then he put his weapon on safety, pointed it at him and said he was going to shoot him. At this time the man turned out to be an NVA area commander. They immediately brought in a chopper to take the guy out. Next time Medina saw him in camp, he was all cleaned up and looked better than the captain."

The attack of March 16, 1968, has led to army investigations and charges of alleged massacre, in which a lieutenant in Medina's company faces court-martial for the alleged premeditated murder of 109 civilians.

Mr. Bailey said that an Army officer had called Capt. Medina after the lawyer reported Sunday that the captain's orders had been to attack the village as a Viet Cong stronghold, with expectations that it would be clear of women and children by 7 a.m., before the scheduled assault.

Mr. Bailey said the capture of the "NVA area commander" indicated the military significance of the attack. He made his comments after Life magazine quoted a soldier with a somewhat different version of the incident.

The Life article quoted Spec. 5 John Kinch as saying that Capt. Medina had drawn his .38-cal. revolver, removed five rounds and then played "Russian roulette" with the prisoner. Mr. Bailey said there was "no Russian roulette" involved.

The lawyer has asked President Nixon for a conference with government officials to discuss the handling of the investigation of the attack, in which he said Capt. Medina "gave a lawful order." Capt. Medina has not been brought under any Army charges.

U.S. Guns Shell North of DMZ For First Time in 2 Months

SAIGON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—U.S. artillerymen today reported they fired into the North Vietnamese half of the Demilitarized Zone for the first time in two months after chasing a band of infiltrators back across the border.

It was the 17th time since the bombing of North Vietnam stopped 13 months ago that U.S. gunners have shelled the northern half of the border zone.

Military spokesmen said a spotter pilot first sighted 40 to 80 of the infiltrators yesterday in the southern half of the zone just below the Ben Hai River, the dividing line. He called in U.S. salvos.

The shells knocked out three bunkers and triggered a secondary explosion, sending the soldiers fleeing back across the river to the northern side. They opened fire on the plane and damaged it.

Field reports said the pilot, unhurt, called in more strikes against the guerrillas, now in the North Vietnam part of the zone, and their ground fire stopped. He landed safely at a nearby allied field.

Light and scattered fighting was reported elsewhere, with American marines using artillery on the northern coast yesterday to kill 23 North Vietnamese troops near An Hoa, a long-time guerrilla trouble spot.

Headquarters listed seven Americans dead and 19 wounded yesterday and early today in 30 shelling attacks against allied targets.

U.S. Surgeon Cuts Grenade From Face of Viet Cong POW

SAIGON, Dec. 2 (AP).—Using a pocket knife for a scalpel, a U.S. Army surgeon removed a live grenade recently from the face of a Viet Cong prisoner while a demolition expert steadied the patient's head, the U.S. Air Force disclosed today.

The patient survived the operation—during which the grenade could have exploded at any time—and is now described as "in good condition...up and walking around."

The "operating room" was a hastily built, sand-bagged bunker on the helicopter pad of an Army hospital at Qui Nhon. It was considered too risky to carry the wounded man inside.

"And as if we didn't have enough trouble already, it began to rain," recalled the surgeon, Lt. Col. Thomas H. Witschi.

The incident occurred several weeks ago but was not disclosed until today for what an Air Force spokesman termed security reasons.

Details were released by the Air Force because—although the unusual surgery was an Army job—the grenade was first discovered by Air Force X-ray technicians, whose hospital had no skilled surgeon to perform it.

At least three similar feats have been performed by American military surgeons during the Vietnam war, all successful.

In every instance, including the latest, the explosive device has been a U.S.-made M-79 grenade, which must travel a certain distance through the air before automatically fusing itself to explode.

Draft Lottery Is Reinstated

in the uphill fight they won against Congress to switch to this new system argue its chief advantage is reducing the period of eligibility—and a young man's uncertainty—to one year.

No longer does a youth who does not want to be drafted have to sweat it out for seven years—19 to 26. If his birth date and alphabetical standing put him too far down the list to be called in his year of eligibility, he escapes the draft completely.

During this first year of operation, all men aged 18 1/2 to 26 will be eligible. After 1970, the idea is to limit the year of vulnerability to a man's 19th year.

The director of the old system, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, was on hand to see the new one inaugurated. Gen. Hershey, 76, retires in a few weeks as director of the Selective Service System after an embattled career.

Asked what he thought of the lottery plan Gen. Hershey said: "It's going to help, period." He did not want to get too specific—having been cool to the change originally.

But, for one thing, Gen. Hershey said, "It has the advantage of something new."

There were scattered protests against the new system as the drawing droned on. A few well-dressed members of the State Youth Advisory Board appointed by President Nixon to work on draft reform said they welcomed the change but that it was not the complete overhaul still needed.

Trim Youths

Advance predictions of a walkout to break up the drawing were not borne out. About a dozen youths who gathered on the sidewalk were not admitted into the building. Admission was by ticket only.

One trimly groomed youth after another drew capsules from the jar until John F. Crawford, Indiana's representative on the Youth Advisory Committee, walked to his place at the front of the room to draw the 115th through the 121st birth date.

"The youth of Indiana are proud to participate," he said, because although the new system "is not the final answer," it is "an important first step toward a better system."

David L. Fowler, the District of Columbia representative, sounded a harsher note—but said it politely. "I have been notified by the (D.C. Youth Advisory) Committee not to draw," he said.

Mr. Fowler then turned on his heel to leave the room. Gen. Hershey, as he had done for the others, stood up as Mr. Fowler neared the exit and gave him two pats on the shoulder.

State Dept. Bars British Student

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (Reuters)—The State Department has blocked a visit to the United States by Tariq Ali, the Pakistani-born British student leader, because he burned an American flag in front of the U.S. embassy in London last week, U.S. officials said today.

Mr. Ali was invited by the Association of Arab American University Graduates for a speaking engagement in Detroit next weekend.

U.S. officials stressed, however, that the Ali case had no relation to the case of Ernest Mandel, a Belgian Marxist economist who was refused a waiver last week.

In Mr. Mandel's case, the State Department recommended that a waiver be granted but the Justice Department, which has the final say, refused.

TARGET UNIT TRUST GROUP

Target Offshore Fund

An international growth fund designed to provide maximum investment and tax advantages to investors throughout the world.

TARGET OFFSHORE FUND
Investors will benefit from the special features of the Fund, some of which result directly from its location in a tax exempt area. The Fund provides:

- An international growth portfolio of first class Sterling and Dollar area investments.
- Freedom from capital gains tax on "switching" within the portfolio.
- Reinvestment of the income of the Fund, subject only to the appropriate withholding taxes of the countries in which the Fund is invested.
- Gearing achieved by a Dollar Loan secured against the investments comprising the portfolio.
- Freedom from the Investment Dollar Premium and the 25% surrender penalty on those Dollar securities financed by the Dollar Loan.

The Fund is operated along the lines of a normal U.K. unit trust. It is registered as an Exempted Trust under the existing Trusts Law of the Cayman Islands and the Trustee has received an undertaking from the Government that the Trust will be exempt from future Cayman tax legislation for a period of fifty years. The Trustee and Management companies are registered in the Cayman Islands.

INVESTMENT POLICY
The policy of the Fund is to invest in international markets and will normally be comprised of ordinary or common stocks. The Managers will alter the geographical spread from time to time with a view to obtaining the maximum investment performance but the present intention is to invest as follows: North America 40%, United Kingdom 40%, other areas including Australia, Europe, Japan, South Africa, and South America 20%. The Managers are advised on all aspects of the investment policy by London merchant bankers, Guinness Mahon & Co. Limited, who have wide experience and a successful record of investment management.

ELIGIBLE INVESTORS
The Fund is available to all investors providing that the legislation of their country of citizenship, residence or domicile so permits.

THE PURCHASE OF UNITS
Units can be purchased on the second Wednesday of each month (the Valuation Day). The offer price on the last dealing day, 12th November 1969, was 20/10d. Applications (minimum 250 Units) must be made on an application form obtainable from the Managers. A contract note will be issued within ten days of the Valuation Day. Settlement must be in Sterling either by cheque or Banker's draft. Certificates will be issued within 56 days of purchase.

ixon Urges National Drive n Hunger and Malnutrition

SHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI).— t Nixon called today for mined, concerted national ainst hunger and malnutri- ming from persisting pov- America.

sing the opening of the House Conference on Food, n and Health, Mr. Nixon ed new public support for range of pending domestic legislation, particularly the administration proposal for a guaranteed basic income for each American family.

"Let the reform of the bankrupt welfare system be the next great cause of those who come together today," the chief executive said in a speech prepared for delegates assembled at the Sheraton Park Hotel for the three-day meeting.

Calling the conference "a historic milestone," Mr. Nixon said that while he expected the meeting to develop "a lively difference of opinions," the fact that the conference was being held at all is a "seal of urgency on our national commitment to put an end to hunger and malnutrition due to poverty in America."

From Ignorance

"At the same time," he said, "it marks the beginning of a new, more determined and more concerted drive than ever before to reduce the malnutrition that derives from ignorance or inadvertence.

"I expect to read that you have had a lively difference of opinions during this conference. That is as it should be. From an airing of the views of all sides, answers and ideas will appear. Answers and ideas are what we seek in this process. Obviously, if we knew all the answers we would not have convened this conference in the first place."

He pledged that findings and suggestions resulting from the food conference will not be put away to gather dust on government shelves—something he said had been happening to so-called White House conferences for at least the 22 years he had observed them.

His policy, he said, will be to follow up each such conference with a meeting one year later to measure what has been done about implementing findings and recommendations in the particular field.

Three Proposals

Pointing out that he has recommended appropriation of more than $5 billion next year for new or expanded food and family assistance programs, the President asked the conference to get behind three of his basic legislative programs:

● Assured income. This plan, he said, either supplementing or providing the basis for incomes of 25 million Americans, would enable each family to judge its own priorities to provide additional income to be spent as the family sees fit and not according to a federally set schedule or dole.

● Food stamps. He pushed his plan for providing stamps free to those most in need, thus attacking what he called a notable inequity of the present system under which many of the neediest cannot even afford the stamps.

● Family planning. He feels there is growing national support for his proposed establishment of a commission on population growth, saying there are some five million women in low-income families who need guidance.

"Taken together, these three measures should virtually eliminate the problem of poverty as a cause for malnutrition," Mr. Nixon said. "Their dollar cost is high, but their practical benefits to the nation are immense."

From National Endowment for the Arts

Senate's Finest Poet Wins $500 U.S. Award

By Michael Kernan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (WP).—Washington's most celebrated living poet, Sen. Eugene McCarthy, has just scored heavily on his more lighthearted critics: He has won a $500 award from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Sen. McCarthy, a candidate in the 1968 Democratic presidential primaries, said yesterday he had not been told of the award. Similar awards went to 63 other poets and prose writers and 46 editors of little magazines in the country.

"I guess this'll stop those politicians who have been criticizing my poetry," he chuckled. "I don't mind when they take a crack at my prose, but when they hit the poetry—that's serious!" The poem "Three Bad Signs" appeared in the New Mexico Quarterly, where it was spotted by pre-readers for the endowment and shown to the judges, Denise Levertov, Reed Whittemore and William Stafford, all noted poets. Authors do not submit their work for consideration.

Winning works will be published in the American Literary Anthology, No. 3, to be released by Viking Press in January on a non-profit basis, according to the announcement by Nancy Hanks, chairman of the National Council on the Arts and of the Endowment, a federal agency created in 1965.

Eugene McCarthy

Sen. McCarthy said he probably would turn the money back to the endowment. The poem first appeared in Life magazine and later was included in his book, "The Year of the People," and in a privately published collection of his poems, he said.

The Minnesota Democrat completed the 66-line poem during the Indiana primary campaign last year, but he had been working on it for some time. The three bad signs, commented upon with succinct irony, are: "Green River ordinance enforced here. Peddlers not allowed." "Mixed drinks" and "We serve all faiths."

Sen. McCarthy said the first sign was derived from a 1931 ordinance passed in Green River, Wyo., and sustained by the U.S. Supreme Court, allowing communities to exclude traveling peddlers. It is, perhaps, the strongest section of the poem, and it begins:

This is a clean, safe town.
No one can just come round
With ribbons and bright threads
Or new books to be read.
This is an established place.
We have accepted patterns in lace,
And ban itinerant vendors of new forms and whirls.
All things that turn the heads of girls. ...

But Pentagon Figure Is Called Too Low

Arms Cost Put $20 Billion Above Estimates

By Bernard D. Nossiter

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (WP).—The Pentagon has estimated that its major weapons programs are costing $20 billion more than the Defense Department originally estimated.

This was disclosed yesterday in a report by Sen. John Stennis, D., Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee. He has requested quarterly reports on overruns from the military and the latest box score covers the status of 35 weapons on Sept. 1.

Specialists in procurement noted that the report understates the size of the overruns by several billions of dollars and is already out of date. Sen. Stennis, a defender of the Pentagon, is himself skeptical of the data. He has asked Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard to improve future reports by including all the outlays for new components and training items.

Among the understatements observed by experts are the figures given for the Minuteman missile. The Congressional Joint Economic Committee has received testimony that costs have risen on Minuteman-II alone by $3.7 billion. The Pentagon figure is $761 million.

Again, the Defense Department puts the cost of 120 C-5As at $5 billion. But last month, when the military decided to cut the program because of the ballooning expenses, the cost was acknowledged to have reached $5.3 billion. Other sources have placed it at $5.8 billion. Compared to the document released by Sen. Stennis, this would add $800 million to the $1.6 billion overrun that the Pentagon now concedes.

Stennis Tells Why

In a statement accompanying the report, Sen. Stennis said that costs have risen for several reasons that he suggested were not the fault of the military or its suppliers.

Among them, he said, were: the difficulty of estimating, inflation, "technological improvements" to weapons, and delays.

Procurement critics, however, say that "improvement" often makes a weapon less effective and simply rewards contractors with more money. In addition, the critics have charged that the military and its suppliers deliberately "buy in" on programs with low estimates to sell them to the Secretary of Defense and Congress. Moreover, congressional committees have heard evidence that officers in charge of weapons systems permit contractors to multiply costs without restraint.

The Pentagon box score covered weapons originally estimated to cost $74.2 billion and now put at $94.1 billion. But this increase of 27 percent also understates the real growth. The list includes five major systems, like the anti-ballistic missile program, for which no overrun is recorded because no production has yet taken place.

On the Pentagon list, the biggest overrun is attributed to the controversial F-111, or swing-wing fighter. The Defense Department says that costs have climbed $4 billion from an original estimate of $3.3 billion. In percentage terms, the largest overrun is ascribed to the Navy's Mark-48 submarine-launched torpedo. It has nearly quintupled in cost, from $655 million to $3.2 billion.

Sen. Stennis noted that he has asked the General Accounting Office to examine seven programs, and three reports have been completed. They discuss the Short Range Attack Missile, the Condor and the cancelled Cheyenne helicopter. However, none of these outside audits have as yet been made public.

Jumbo Boeing-747 Jet Makes First Seattle-to-New York Hop

SEATTLE, Dec. 2 (AP).—A new chapter in aviation—the age of the jumbo jet—was previewed today as a Boeing-747, capable of carrying nearly 500 passengers, flew from here to New York with 191 persons aboard.

The flight was arranged to demonstrate the capabilities of the $20 million, 625-mph plane to newsmen. At the same time, another flight was to have marked the delivery of the first 747 to Pan American Airways in Honolulu. But Pan Am delayed acceptance for a final nighttime test and probably will not make the Honolulu hop until tomorrow.

The giant plane landed at Kennedy Airport early this afternoon to give New York its first glimpse of the largest plane designed for commercial service.

Award for Space Director

PRINCETON, N.J., Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Dr. Robert R. Gilruth, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, was named a winner of a $10,000 1969 Rockefeller Public Service award yesterday.

Defective Glove Quarantines 11 Working With Moon Rocks

SPACE CENTER, Houston, Dec. 2 (UPI).—A rubber glove with a hole in one finger was all it took to put seven scientists, almost one-third of the team examining Apollo-12's moon rocks, out of action.

It also shut down for up to 36 hours the laboratory where the scientists were studying the rocks and where they had just found a rock type prominent in Apollo-11's lunar samples but strangely lacking in those of Apollo-12.

The defective glove, discovered last night, exposed the scientists and four technicians to the lunar material. Space agency officials immediately quarantined them all with Apollo-12 astronauts Charles Conrad, Richard F. Gordon and Alan L. Bean.

The eleven newcomers to the isolation suite at the space center's Lunar Receiving Laboratory must remain locked up with the astronauts until Dec. 10 to make sure they have not been contaminated. Officials said this was highly unlikely.

Strain Put on Team

Anthony J. Calio, chief of science and applications at the space center, said loss of the scientists from the moon-rock team for ten days of the four-week examination period would place a strain on other team members but should not delay too long the initial examinations.

Mr. Calio said an unexpected side benefit of the accident would be the opportunity for the experts in mineralogy and petrology to talk at length with the men who made America's second moon landing.

The accident was the first in handling Apollo-12's 72 1/4 pounds of lunar rock and soil samples, and the third in the history of the lab. Five persons, including a girl, were quarantined with the Apollo-11 crew as a result of two accidental exposures to moon material.

Mr. Calio said that just before the accident yesterday, the scientists had discovered two conglomerate rocks called breccia, "the first ones we've been able to observe."

The absence of these rocks, which made up three-fourths of the Apollo-11 lunar treasure, from Apollo-12's samples was considered the greatest scientific mystery to come from the flight.

Poll Says 42% Disapprove of Agnew's Actions

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP).—A Harris Poll published yesterday said 42 percent of the people interviewed disapproved of Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew's actions, while 40 percent approved.

The poll of 1,445 households was taken Nov. 16-21. Mr. Agnew made his controversial speech criticizing the television networks on Nov. 14.

The survey found Mr. Agnew is most popular in the South, in small towns and among people over 50.

A large proportion—67 percent—gave him credit for "having the courage to speak out against radical blacks and students where others don't dare."

Eaton Continues to Hanoi

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (AP).—U. S. industrialist Cyrus Eaton left Moscow by air for Hanoi today on a private mission that he hopes will lead to peace in Vietnam.

No Rules Set In Order to Desegregate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (WP).—The Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in effect yesterday that the South must desegregate all of its schools by September, 1970, at the latest.

But the court declined, in a major opinion issued from its headquarters in New Orleans, to spell out just what a properly desegregated school system might or might not be.

The 24-page opinion covered appeals from federal district court desegregation decisions in 16 school districts in six Southern states.

The 16 cases involved a rich array of legal issues. The main one was the pace of desegregation. But there were others of almost equal importance—whether massive residential segregation is an excuse for keeping some all-Negro schools, whether school districts can stop segregating by race but start segregating by test scores or sex, whether the generally liberal Fifth Circuit should keep control of desegregation cases or send them back to frequently unsympathetic district judges.

The Fifth Circuit had hoped to formulate some overriding rules that would settle all these bothersome issues. In the interim, however, the Supreme Court issued its desegregate-at-once decision, and that seemed to blot out other questions in the Fifth Circuit's ruling yesterday.

In all 16 cases, the court ordered that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare be consulted and a complete desegregation plan be agreed upon effective next September.

The court also said that all 16 school districts must desegregate their faculties, bus routes, and athletic and other extra-curricular activities no later than next Feb. 1, about mid-term. It stopped short, however, of rulings on most of the other questions before it.

A Correction

The Nov. 26 editions of the International Herald Tribune carried a Reuters report from Moscow concerning a would-be Russian political refugee who had entered the French Embassy. The story stated that the woman "was turned over to Soviet authorities about eight hours later." This statement did not appear in the Reuters dispatch but was inserted by the Herald Tribune from information from another news agency. Inadvertently, this information was not attributed to that agency. We have been informed that the statement is incorrect and that the Russian left the embassy voluntarily. The Herald Tribune regrets the error.

Is it true what they say about Americans abroad?

They say that travelling Americans are sampling raki, sake and ouzo. It's true. But ask them what their favorite is, what they serve most of —you'll find their answer is Bourbon whiskey. Old Grand-Dad Bourbon to be exact. Next time enjoy—and serve your friends—Old Grand-Dad, "The Head of the Bourbon Family." You don't have to be in America to enjoy this famous American.

Nomadic Hippie Cult Implicated in Ritual Murders

complaint filed here yesterday by Deputy District Attorney Vincent Bugliosi, with the slaying at the Tate home of 18-year-old Steven Parent.

Mr. Parent, who had been visiting the caretaker, was shot to death in his car, parked in the driveway of the secluded estate rented by Miss Tate and her director-husband Roman Polanski.

He is not believed to have been acquainted with Miss Tate or the other three Aug. 9 victims—hairstylist Jay Sebring, Polish playboy Voityck Frykowsky and coffee heiress Abigail Folger.

Mr. Watson, a native of Texas, goes by the nickname of "Tex," and his cousin, Tom Montgomery, is sheriff of the county where he is being held.

The suspect was described by Sheriff Montgomery as clean-shaven and wearing his hair short when arrested.

The two young women charged with five counts of murder in complaints filed by Mr. Bugliosi are Linda Kasabian, 19, and Patricia Krenwinkel, 21, both Los Angeles-area residents.

Miss Krenwinkel, also known as Mary Scott, Marnie Reeves and "Katie," and charged under the name Krenwinkel, was arrested in Mobile, Ala., her childhood home.

[In Mobile, James Atchison, attorney for Miss Krenwinkel, said today that she will fight extradition to Los Angeles, the Associated Press reported.

[The lawyer said she "knows absolutely nothing about the case."]

Miss Kasabian today surrendered to New Hampshire state police.

No charges were filed in connection with the slayings of wealthy grocery executive Leno Labianca and his wife Rosemary in their Silver Lake, Calif., home the day after the Benedict Canyon massacre.

Formal charges in either case have yet to be filed against Mr. Manson, the alleged cult leader, who has a criminal record dating back 18 years; or the third female suspect, Susan Denise Atkins, 21.

However, Mr. Manson is in custody, charged with arson and receiving stolen property, in the town of Independence, Calif., site of the "family's" most recent encampment.

Miss Atkins, also known as Sadie Glutz, is in custody here, accused of a murder related to both the Tate carnage and the Labianca murders.

Under a "Spell"

Police believe that, at the outside, the "family" numbers no more than 35, but investigators suspect that knowledge of the murders was widespread among members, all held in the thrall of their leader by some still inexplicable "spell."

The cult to which the suspects belong is an anomaly, even in the offbeat hippie world. Beyond its members' proclivity for violence, the cult displays other aberrations.

The men wear long hair, but the women crop it short, and they identify with no one but their own close group.

Those who have observed them, especially the young women, say their mien is almost ethereal, as if they are listening to voices they alone can hear.

It is believed that police have some, but not all, of the physical evidence to support circumstantial evidence obtained from informants.

In search of it, six homicide detectives and Mr. Bugliosi—armed with the young woman informant's tips—sped to the abandoned Death Valley encampment the night of Nov. 19 with a search warrant. Their objective was a converted school bus which the clan used as a mobile headquarters during their meanderings.

The searchers reportedly found no weapons, but confiscated clothing and other articles which they hope may yield evidence.

Dune Buggies

Most of the tribe, officers discovered, had been seized in mid-October at their encampment in barren Desert Canyon, Calif., in the Death Valley area, and booked as suspects in a ring specializing in the theft of dune buggies and expensive automobiles.

Many of the same hippies had been arrested two months earlier, or just a week after the Tate killings, for similar thefts during a raid on an isolated ranch where they were living in an abandoned movie set.

But it was from the ranch that police believe the suspects made murderous sorties into populated areas when the deities to whom they paid homage so ordained.

Asked if the clan was "any kind of religious organization," Chief Davis replied, "It perhaps could have some religious connotation connected with it, depending on your frame of references."

Those familiar with the nomads say they practiced "a kind of witchcraft," and that part of their rites was associated with drug usage—marijuana and LSD, but not the "hard stuff," heroin and cocaine, used by some of the Tate-Polanski intimates.

After the ranch sojourn, remnants of the tribe drifted to the Death Valley commune and were soon joined by others who had been freed on bail or had their charges dismissed.

At the time of the October raid on the Death Valley commune in the Panamint Range, officers found about 30 persons—men, young women and even a few children—living in two primitive miners' cabins.

Bikini Bottoms

Deputies also found fortified observation posts, equipped with telescopes and walkie-talkies, and Mr. Manson reportedly was manning one of the lookout stations when officers arrived.

The area, about three hours from Independence, is virtually inaccessible except by four-wheel-drive vehicles.

Most of the young women arrested in October were nude or clad only in bikini bottoms at the time of the raid. Some of them, and the men, wore sheath knives.

Officers confiscated guns there, as well as at the ranch.

Deputies said Death Valley miners had complained of being driven away from the encampment earlier by young people armed with knives.

Mr. Manson, slight and fierce-eyed, with shoulder-length hair, was in jail as a result of the Death Valley raid at the time he came under suspicion in the Tate case.

Miss Atkins also was arrested in the Death Valley raid, then brought to Los Angeles County when evidence linked her to a Malibu-area torture murder.

'Political Piggy'

Slain there last July in his home was Gary Hinman, 34, a musician. He had been stabbed numerous times. "Political Piggy" was scrawled in blood on one wall of his home.

"Pig" was found written in blood at the Tate mansion when the murders were discovered there, and "Death to Pigs" was smeared in blood on the door of the refrigerator in the Labianca home.

There has been speculation that the gruesome legends were an attempt to throw investigators off the scent, to make it appear the slayings may have been the work of black militants, which the Manson "family" is known to despise.

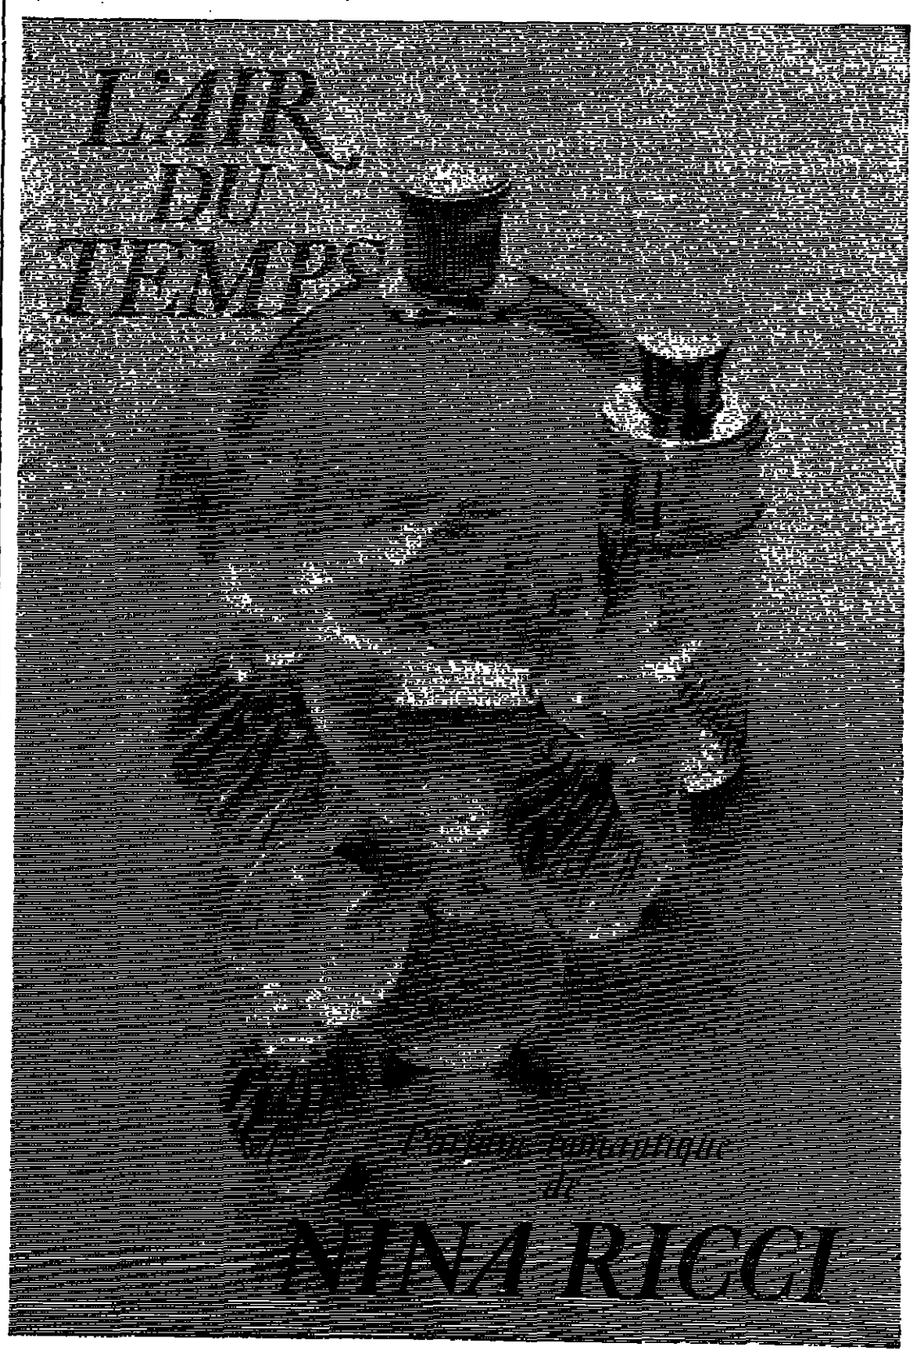

Death Valley residents said they had heard the Manson clan had retreated to the remote communes because they feared a black takeover in Los Angeles.

Polanski 'Overjoyed'

LONDON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Director Roman Polanski said today he was "overjoyed" that police had made arrests in connection with the murder of his wife, Miss Tate, the Evening News reported.

Mr. Polanski, who is now in California, telephoned his business partner's wife, Judy Gutowski, who said, "He was absolutely overjoyed. He said it was a terrific break. He said the people who have been arrested are completely unknown to him."

Russia Helps Cuba With New Weapons

Revealed in Article In Military Paper

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—The Soviet Union is helping Cuba equip its armed forces with the newest weapons and military equipment, the armed forces newspaper Red Star said today.

Cuba's military men were working hard to learn how to master "formidable modern weapons and military equipment," it said in an article marking Cuban Armed Forces Day, which falls today.

Red Star did not specify the types of weapons but Western experts here said the loose phraseology used could cover all sorts of weapons—including rockets, heavy artillery, tanks, aircraft and ships.

They said that if rockets were meant, there was every reason to assume that they were surface-to-air missiles and possibly short-range ground-to-ground missiles—and not medium-range intercontinental rockets of the type which caused the 1962 Soviet-American crisis after the Russians installed several in Cuba.

Observers saw the warmly worded article as a possible indication that the Defense Minister, Andrei Grechko, discussed a new arms deal with Cuban leaders last month during his visit to the island, the first by a Soviet defense minister.

Soviet-Cuban relations, strained since the 1962 crisis, have been returning to normal during the past year.

Czech Elections, Red Congress Are Postponed Until 1971

PRAGUE, Dec. 2 (AP).—The oft-postponed congress of the Czechoslovak Communist party is not likely to be held before 1971, a government spokesman said today.

The announcement supplied new evidence of a power struggle within the party.

Josef Havlin, director of the government's Press and Information Office, told a news conference that, according to all indications, "both the party congress and Czechoslovak general elections would come in 1971."

The congresses normally take place every four years. The last was in 1964. An extraordinary congress held shortly after the Soviet-led invasion in 1968 and completely controlled by the liberal supporters of then party chief Alexander Dubcek has since been ruled illegal.

Observers believe there are two factors involved in the postponements.

First, strictly orthodox elements in the party believe that Dubcek supporters, especially in the lower and middle echelons of the party, still are trying to regain influence. These conservatives charge that less vulnerable liberals are taking the place of those ousted or forced to resign.

Conservative 'Vendetta'

But Gustav Husak, the new party chief, and his more moderate aides are known to be more concerned about the conservatives, who would like to seize complete control of the party.

In the lower echelons these conservatives are pressing for action against even moderate liberals, in what one well-informed Czech source called a "vendetta campaign."

Mr. Havlin today said the authorities will try to further "consolidate the situation" in 1970 to create adequate conditions for elections and the Communist party congress.

He added that the party central committee will meet around mid-January next year to discuss the country's economic situation. This meeting has been repeatedly postponed.

Also today, the Education Ministry revoked most of the action program shaped by its liberal leadership in 1968 and 1969.

In doing so, it followed the example set several weeks ago by the Culture Ministry—basing official policy for the nation's intellectuals on directives formulated long before the Dubcek reforms.

The action program, which outlined reforms in education, "contains [policies] which are fundamentally incorrect, non-class, [and] non-Marxist," a ministry statement distributed by the official news agency CTK said.

Wolves Almost Extinct

OSLO, Dec. 2 (UPI).—The wolf, once the terror of lonely travelers and farmers on isolated farms, is almost extinct in Scandinavia, the Norwegian Wild Life Service said yesterday. There are probably not more than 20 or 25 wolves left in Norway, Sweden and Finland, the service said.

Warsaw Pact Meets Today to Thrash Out Policy on Bon

By David Binder

BONN, Dec. 2 (NYT).—The major participants in the summit meeting of Soviet-bloc states that begins tomorrow in Moscow have been busily gathering "evidence" to support their conflicting positions on how to deal with the new West German government headed by Willy Brandt.

According to sources in East Berlin, the East German Communists have already amassed an enormous documentation to show that Bonn's Social Democratic government is as serious a danger—if not worse—to Walter Ulbricht's East German state than Chancellor Brandt's conservative predecessors.

The East German argument, it is said, will be that West Germany should be kept at a great distance from Communist Europe, if not boycotted altogether.

The sources said that East Germany will be opposed by Poland, Hungary and the Soviet Union, who are arguing for a measure of reconciliation with West Germany.

The sources said these countries have been gathering an equally massive "counterdocumentation" to prove that the time is ripe for seeking accommodation with Bonn that would lower tensions in Central Europe.

Emphasis on Trade

The counterdocumentation's main emphasis, one source said, was the fact that trade between the two Germanys had ballooned by 30 percent in the first nine months of 1969 to $75 million—larger than the annual volume of Soviet-West German trade.

East Germany's Communist allies are extremely jealous of this trade, not only because of its considerable volume, but also because it is carried out without customs or border taxes—giving East Germany the status of a non-dues-paying member of the European Common Market. No other East European state enjoys this benefit.

Asked to explain why Romania, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia were playing no major roles in the controversy over how to deal with Bonn, a Communist source explained:

"Romania is a bit out of it because it is pursuing an independent policy and has already established diplomatic relations with Bonn. Czechoslovakia does not count because it has been reduced to impotence by the Soviet occupation. Bulgaria is too small."

The Soviet Union and Poland have already indicated interest in improving commercial and political ties with the Federal Republic—much to the annoyance of East Germany. Hungary's party chief, Janos Kadar, chimed in over the weekend in an interview with the Italian Communist paper, Unita, in which he said the Brandt government's approach to East Europe should be given serious attention.

Leaders Arrive in Moscow

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Leaders of the Soviet Un Warsaw Pact allies have rived in Moscow for their this week, it was officially tonight.

The Communist party here, besides Messrs. Ulbr Kadar, are Nicolae Ceau Romania, Gustav Husak of slovakia, Wladyslaw Gom Poland and Todor Zhivkov garia.

Saudi, South Yemeni Fighting Reported

BEIRUT, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Fierce land and air fighting continued for the third consecutive day today along the disputed border between South Yemen and Saudi Arabia.

A Saudi military spokesman said the Saudi Royal Air Force yesterday destroyed 14 Yemeni transport vehicles filled with food and ammunition and inflicted an undisclosed number of casualties on Yemeni troops.

"All our planes returned safely to their base," the spokesman was quoted as saying by the official Jeddah Radio, monitored here.

But news reports published today in Aden said South Yemeni anti-aircraft fire downed a Saudi plane yesterday and the Yemeni Air Force hit Saudi forces massing on the border, destroying armored vehicles.

The reports in the official South Yemeni newspaper Al Thawri said their troops also inflicted heavy casualties on the Saudis yesterday and fierce fighting continued today.

The newspaper also said all Saudi planes were being flown by Iranian pilots, following an attempted coup in the Saudi Royal Air Force last June.

Disputed Area

Fighting broke out between South Yemeni and Saudi troops last Wednesday over the disputed area of al-Wadeea, 300 miles north of Aden.

Saudi warplanes began shelling South Yemeni forces who took over al-Wadeea last Saturday and continued their raids until yesterday. The conflict over al-Wadeea, according to Cairo's semi-official daily Al Ahram, dates back to 1956 when the Saudi government gave the American-owned Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco) a concession to explore for oil in the area.

Aramco moved technicians and rigs into the area and Saudi officials went along with them, Al Ahram said.

Operations, however, stopped completely following a move by the British authorities in South Yemen, Al Ahram said.

In 1957, the British sent the Bedouin Corps in South Yemen into the area and they drove off the oil officials, occupied the area, and seized the drilling equipment, according to Al Ahram.

South Yemen, Al Ahram reported, says that the recent border incidents were caused by Saudi Arabia after the Aden government concluded an oil agreement with Algeria for exploration in al-Wadeea. The agreement provided for establishment of a joint Yemeni-Algerian oil company to undertake the exploration operations, Al Ahram said.

Consequently, the Saudis moved a military force to al-Shoqreerah, a Saudi area adjacent to al-Wadeea. This prompted the South Yemeni forces to move in and occupy al-Wadeea, Al Ahram added.

Egyptian Mediation

CAIRO, Dec. 2 (AP).—Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser is exploring the possibility of mediating the undeclared border war between Saudi Arabia and South Yemen, Al Ahram said today.

If it yielded to either demand, the FTC would be setting a precedent for the handling of future "cease and desist" proceedings. That is precisely what the students are seeking.

They want to establish the right of consumers to intervene as parties in such proceedings, and they want the commission to adopt a policy of imposing sanctions against advertisers who deceive the public.

As sanctions in the present case, they are asking the commission to require Campbell to inform viewers in future commercials that the company engaged in deceptive advertising by seeding its televised soup with marbles.

By a 3-to-2 vote, the commission set a hearing for Dec. 18 on whether the students should be permitted to participate in the case as parties, or adversaries, representing all consumers. The two dissenters—Commissioners Philip Elman and A. Everette MacIntyre—contended that the motion to intervene should be granted without a hearing.

In setting the hearing, the commission called on Campbell, BBD&O, the FTC's general counsel and SOUP to prepare briefs and oral arguments.

Stephen Potter Dies at 69, 'Lifemanship' Books Author

LONDON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Stephen Potter, 69, satirical author of a trilogy on "Lifemanship," died today in a London Hospital.

A former secretary to playwright Henry Arthur Jones and a lecturer in English literature at London University, Mr. Potter joined the staff of the British Broadcasting Corp. in 1938 as a writer and producer.

He gained prominence in 1947 with "Gamesmanship," which told habitual losers at games how to win without actually cheating. This book was followed in 1950 by "Lifemanship" and in 1952 by "One-Upmanship." The theme of all was how, through bravado, cunning and wit a Milquetoast could wow girls, win at games and stay one-up on his fellows.

W. Gordon Coogan

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (NYT).—W. Gordon Coogan, 81, a former vice-chairman of the National Democratic Finance Committee and formerly part owner of the Polo Grounds, died Sunday. Mr. Coogan was long active in Democratic party affairs and was a close friend of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. In the Roosevelt campaign for the presidency he was one of the leaders in the fund-raising drive conducted throughout the country.

The Coogan family bought much real estate in the city before 1900, including the Polo Grounds and the adjoining Manhattan Field, both recently taken by the city for a housing project.

Vicki Cummings

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT).—Vicki Cummings, the actress, often praised by the critics for her portrayals of sophisticated, sharp-tongued women, died Sunday after a long illness.

She was born in 1919, and made her New York debut in 1931, with Bobby Clark in the short-lived "Here Goes the Bride." With a singing voice often likened to that of Ethel Merman, she appeared in touring companies of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes" and George Gershwin's "Of Thee I Sing." Her first straight comedy role was as Olive Lashbrooke in John Van Druten's three-character hit, "The Voice of the Turtle," in 1943. Hardly a season passed in which Miss Cummings was not seen on Broadway, and she appeared summers on the strawhat circuit and in musical revivals.

Gen. Yakov Kreizer

MOSCOW, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Gen. Yakov Kreizer, 65, one of the Soviet Union's most prominent Jews, has died after a serious illness, it was officially reported today. An army commander in World War II, he was a specialist in shock tactics and took part in the liberation of the Crimea and the Baltic states. After the war he became a military district commander and in recent years was in charge of higher officers' courses.

J.L. McCartney

WEST HAMPTON BEACH, N.Y., Dec. 2 (NYT).—Dr. James L. McCartney, 71, a noted and innovative psychiatrist and author, died Saturday of a heart attack at his home here.

In 1938, Dr. McCartney told the annual meeting of the American College of Physicians that hypnosis offered an approach to many psychogenic difficulties since it allowed the physician to influence the subconscious directly.

In 1946, he warned that noise took a staggering toll daily from the physical and mental reserve strength of human beings.

In 1952, Dr. McCartney reported to the American Group Psychotherapy Association that group psychotherapy was "a valid technique with lasting benefit" which "cuts down the length of time necessary to be spent in individual therapy."

Dr. McCartney directed the Bureau of Mental Hygiene of the Connecticut Health Department in 1928-29, was psychiatrist and director of the Classification Clinic at Elmira (N.Y.) Reformatory from 1930 to 1934, and was psychiatrist of the New York State Vocational Institution from 1935 to 1938. He served in the Navy in World War II.

Dr. Josef Lettrich

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Dr. Josef Lettrich, 64, World War II Slovak resistance leader, died in a New York hospital over the weekend.

Dr. Lettrich was sentenced to death by the Nazis for his part in the 1944 Slovak national uprising, but the underground hid him until the liberation of his country.

After the war, he became president of the Slovak National Council and was a founder of the Slovak Democratic party. When the Communists seized power in 1948, he fled in disguise to Austria to escape a threatened treason charge, and later came to the United States, where he lived in Washington.

Paris City Council Was Buyer of Bateau Lavoir

PARIS, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Studios that once housed artists Picasso, the Douanier Rousseau and Cornelis Van Dongen have, after all, been taken over by the Paris City Council, it was confirmed today.

The Bateau Lavoir (Laundry Boat), a 100-year-old clapboard building in Montmartre, was sold at auction yesterday for 800,010 francs ($145,000) to lawyer Georges Desclozeaux.

Mr. Desclozeaux refused to reveal for whom he was bidding. It was speculated that he had acquired the 64-room building on behalf of art dealers who wanted to use the historic building as a gallery.

But finally the Paris City Council said it had kept its promise, made last week, to acquire the building. Mr. Desclozeaux had acted on the council's behalf, a spokesman said today.

The sale of the building, which still houses ten artists, had brought demands from the art world that the city save it for posterity because of its links with the artists.

Feed a Toe, Starve a Fever

GENEVA, Dec. 2 (NYT).—Dr. A. J. Tyrrell, head of Britain's common-cold research unit, does not believe there is a cure for the common cold.

However, in an interview published by the World Health Organization magazine, he said that one man's method for avoiding the ailment was to rub his socks daily with an onion.

"I have a feeling," Dr. Tyrrell commented, "that nobody can get within sneezing distance of him, and that is why he doesn't get a cold."

Cold Wave, Snowstorms Sweep Italy

ROME, Dec. 2 (AP).—Italy today was in the grip of an early cold wave which left dozens of villages isolated in the mountains from the Alps to the heel of the Italian boot.

Two buses were trapped in snowdrifts with students and workers aboard near Benevento, inland from Naples. Police and firemen plowed their way through the snow to reach and dig out private cars stranded on the road.

After two straight days of rain, the weather turned dry at Cardito, near Naples, where flooding had forced evacuation of over 2,000 persons over the weekend.

Mount Vesuvius, Naples's smokeless volcano, was sporting a snow cap. Snow fell all down the backbone of the Italian peninsula.

Temperature dropped drastically everywhere. It reached the lowest reported peak with 7.6 degrees in the Dolomites and fell to 26.6 even in the hills near Bari, on Italy's heel.

In Bolzano, near the Austrian border, thousands were forced to bed by influenza. The City Council was compelled to postpone a session last night because most councilmen were bedridden.

Mass. School Ban On Religion for Holidays Lifted

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Dec. 2 (AP)—The Marblehead school committee Sunday rescinded a ban on all religious reference to Christmas and Hanukkah in public schools.

"The program of observing religious holidays in the Marblehead public school system will continue as it has in the past," the committee said in announcing the decision.

Earlier, the school department in this small coastal community issued a policy statement saying: "All reference to the word Christmas will be eliminated in group activities planned in all Marblehead schools." The school said the ban was to stop complaints of religious bias made in previous years.

Rails, Unions Try To Head Off Strike

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—U.S. railroads and four unions continued round-the-clock negotiations today in attempts to head off a nationwide rail shutdown scheduled for 12:01 a.m. tomorrow.

The machinists, sheet-metal workers, electrical workers and boilermaker-blacksmiths' unions have not disclosed which or how many carriers they would strike but all the major railroads, except the Penn Central, have threatened to shut down nation-wide even if only selected carriers are struck.

The railroads have offered a 2 percent pay raise retroactive to Jan. 1 and a 3 percent boost effective last July 1. A special fact-finding panel appointed by President Nixon recommended that the unions accept this offer, but the unions insist on a 10 percent raise plus two 20-cent-per-hour skill differentials.

Geneva Urged as Site Of UN Economic HQ

UNITED NATIONS, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Sir Robert Jackson, of Australia, recommended yesterday that the UN's headquarters for economic development be shifted from New York to Geneva.

He made his suggestion in a 600-page study of the UN's development system which contained proposals for streamlining and coordinating the economic activities of the UN and its sub-agencies in the field of development.

SS Man a Suicide

MUNICH, Dec. 2 (AP).—A former member of a Nazi SS field police unit suspected of helping shoot Russian Jews during World War II committed suicide in an Augsburg prison cell July 24, the Bavarian Justice Ministry has announced. The ministry said Albert Loew, 56, of Lindau, bled to death after cutting veins in his wrists, feet and neck.

Auto-Policy Pay-Out Less Than 60 Pct.

Lawyers Get a Third Of Premium Gap

By Morton Mintz

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (WP).—A new analysis of auto insurance shows that in the last decade, motorists paid premiums totaling $81.5 billion and got back less than 60 percent of that in benefits. Of the $33.8 billion gap between pay-in and pay-out, lawyers' fees accounted for $10 billion, or almost one-third.

The analysis, said to be of unprecedented scope, was prepared by the staff of the Senate anti-trust subcommittee for a three-day hearing conducted this week by Chairman Philip A. Hart, D., Mich. The hearing was one of a series the subcommittee has held on auto insurance during the last 18 months.

The staff study shows that of the $81.5 billion pay-in in the decade ended last Dec. 31, $47.7 billion was disbursed to claimants as net benefits, $33 billion went for expenses and $800 million was underwriting profit after taxes. Investments of the $81.5 billion yielded an additional after-tax profit of $3.2 billion.

Profit Queried

Although the auto-insurance industry says its earnings are low, subcommittee counsel Dean L. Sharp and Charles E. Bengert presented data challenging the contention.

In the 1959-1968 decade, the staff said, 1,200 firms selling all kinds of insurance—prospering as well as struggling companies—had average after-tax earnings of 10.5 percent. This rate, a staff exhibit said, was 0.3 percent less than that of the nation's 50 largest banks, 0.7 percent more than that of the 50 largest public utilities, and 1.5 percent less than that of the 500 largest industrial corporations.

The staff computed these rates on "mean net worth"—the sum of capital stock, surplus, retained earnings and, in the case of insurance companies, an adjustment to reflect equity in unearned premium reserves.

Of the $47.7 billion in net benefits, $27.5 billion went to settle liability claims (bodily injury and property damage), while $15.2 billion was paid out to satisfy claims for damage to the cars of policyholders. The balance, $5 billion, went to claimants' lawyers.

Agents' Fees High

Of the $33 billion in expenses, $1 billion went to defense lawyers. The largest share, $11.3 billion, was for agents' commissions. Other selling expenses consumed $5 billion, adjustment expenses $5.2 billion, overhead $4.2 billion and state taxes $2.3 billion.

Another staff exhibit showed that the administrative expense involved in delivering benefits is much higher for auto liability than for other forms of insurance.

For auto liability the expense per $100 in benefits was computed to be $125, compared with $50 for workmen's compensation and $20 for group accident and health plans.

In auto liability, lawyers battle over who was at fault in an accident. Workmen's compensation and group accident and health plans pay victims regardless of fault.

In an exchange with Sen. Hart, James M. Cahill, general manager of the Insurance Rating Board, whose members write 24 percent of the auto insurance sold, favored adoption of a no-fault plan.

"Almost everybody would be benefitted," Mr. Cahill said. "A great deal of legal cost would be largely eliminated," and "all the delays would be largely eliminated, too."

Prominent Greeks Urge the World to Oppose Regime

ATHENS, Dec. 2 (UPI).—A group of prominent Greek citizens called today for an end to military rule and warned Western nations against believing the regime's promises of liberalization.

The statement was distributed here only a few days before the Council of Europe is scheduled to discuss the possible suspension of Greek membership because of alleged violations of human rights.

The statement purported to come from 55 prominent men and women, including retired public officials, former navy officers, writers, archeologists and politicians.

"Whenever a European conference with Greece on the agenda is imminent, or whenever the admonitions of friendly governments become more pressing, the regime repeats its original assurances that the deviation (from democracy) will be brief, and it announces measures of so-called liberalization," the statement said. "...All have been shown to be empty words."

"Democracy must return to the land of its birth," it said.

U.S. Theater Group Banned in Italy

ROME, Dec. 2 (AP).—Ten men and six women of New York's "Living Theater," charged with public obscenity for a near-nude show at the University of Rome, were ordered by Italian police to leave the country today.

Julian Beck, leader of the group, said he and his companions would leave immediately for Belgium. The actors were charged after they staged the show without permission.

Anesthetists' Strike Cancels Most Operations in Italy

ROME, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Italian surgeons had to cancel all but urgent operations today because of a nationwide strike by anesthetists.

House surgeons belonging to two unions also caused delays by working to rule to back similar demands for inclusion in new wage agreements being worked out for hospital staffs.

At the same time senior civil-service executives announced another series of work-to-rule campaigns between now and Christmas which spells near paralysis for the state machinery.

The executives consider the government has failed to honor an agreement with them on the details of planned reform of the state bureaucracy.

Many temporary schoolteachers stayed at home today at the start of a ten-day series of teachers' strikes over grievances ranging from low pay and overcrowded classes to lack of security pensions and other benefits.

Tomorrow most elementary teachers will stay away from school, giving thousands of children a day free of lessons.

14 Arrested

ROME, Dec. 2 (AP).—Police announced today the arrest of 14 persons on charges of having destroyed or damaged scores of gasoline filling stations which stayed open during a strike in the Rome area in November last year.

Among those arrested was Alberto Corona, head of the filling station owners' union. Others were members of the union's strike committee. The arrests were made after a year of police investigation.

The Idea of Europe

There was a certain pathos in the demonstration for European federalism outside the Hall of Knights in The Hague. For while within the hall the delegates of the Common Market were revealing bread-and-butter differences that had a strong substratum of nationalism, the Warsaw Pact countries were preparing to do much the same in Moscow. The dream of a truly federalized Europe that flickered like a star of hope over the ruins of World War II can hardly be glimpsed through the clouds of nationalism lying over Europe from the Atlantic to the Urals.

There were, in fact, two approaches to European unity after Nazi Germany's surrender. One was a federal union of democratic states, recognizing their common culture and geographic ties; the other, Marxist internationalism. The latter, in Stalinist hands, was virtually indistinguishable from Russian imperialism; it bound the East in military chains and bound the West, out of fear, in a bondage that was less stringent, to be sure, but was still largely military.

As fear relaxed on both sides of the Iron Curtain, and the curtain itself became frayed and moth-holed, new visions of a new Europe began to emerge. France, under De Gaulle, sought a kind of concert of Europe on the 19th-century pattern, stopping in the west at the Channel, and blandly disregarding the Soviet Union's deep entanglements in Asia. Others in the West tried to strengthen and extend the instruments of cooperation that had been formed in the first bitter need of the Forties and Fifties, while the East began to work toward its own kind of federalism within the tight grasp of the Kremlin.

Economic stresses provided much of the incentive for both Western federalism and Eastern nationalism; fear of America and Soviet strength added to the movement. But these last trends tended to cancel one another out—while fear of a recrudescent Germany played its own part in Central Europe.

The ideal is a Europe extensive enough and united enough to serve as a make-weight against both of the superpowers—and this ideal has inspired much American thinking as well as the merely anti-American thought of many Europeans. But while a Romania, a Yugoslavia, may give some hope of such a development, the example of Czechoslovakia demonstrates that it is still far from realization, and the impenitent and self-serving Stalinism of the East German regime remains as an obstacle to even moderate moves toward European collaboration.

But while the dream of a Monnet, a Churchill, remains just that, there has been progress toward the peaceful coexistence of European states, if not toward organic union. This progress is not unlike the ecumenism of which the Christian religious bodies talk so much these days; if it has not yet resulted in substantial reduction of the number of communions, at least there is no longer the same bitterness among them. Union may not be much closer, but war is receding. And that, given human perversity, is a great gain.

'Here's Your Share of the Moon Rocks. Study Them and Then Justify Their Expense!'

Soviet Literary Life

Most critics, not all of them Western, consider Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn's books among the noblest of this century, without doubt among the noblest Russian works of this century. They are political to the degree that any great book, say any of Tolstoi's, is political. In fact "The First Circle" and "The Cancer Ward" are direct descendants of "The Brothers Karamazov" and "Dead Souls." comparisons which are apt since Solzhenitsyn is now subject to the same official harassment as Dostoevski and Gogol. The only difference is that, unlike Dostoevski, Solzhenitsyn has yet to be imprisoned, and unlike Gogol, he has not yet fled the country. The frightened men of the Kremlin have taken a position not even the czars dared take: They have refused Solzhenitsyn permission to publish. Earlier this year, he was read out of the Writers' Union of the Russian Republic—an institution which, thank God, has no parallel in the United States.

The crimes Solzhenitsyn is said to have committed are many, but the principal one appears to be the crime of thought, which in the Soviet Union today is a very serious offense. Lately, the bandwagon—or is it a tumbrel?—is gathering speed. The latest literary figure to climb aboard is Mikhail A. Sholokhov, the winner of the 1965 Nobel Prize for Literature. According to a dispatch in the New York Times, Sholokhov made his attack in a speech that "drew laughter and applause" from more than 4,500 collective farmers attending a collective farm congress in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses. "We also have bumper and lean years, including dust storms," Sholokhov told the farmers, referring to Soviet literature. "But you have done away with pests while we, unfortunately, have Colorado beetles—those who eat Soviet bread but who want to serve Western bourgeois masters and send their works there through secret channels. Soviet men of letters want to get rid of them." That is the statement of a Nobel laureate before a collective farm congress.

It is very difficult to draw a parallel to the United States. It is as if after the publication of "An American Tragedy" in France, Theodore Dreiser had been banned by all American publishers, denounced by the Coolidge administration and a campaign of vilification begun in the Saturday Evening Post and the Atlantic Monthly, all of this culminating in a derisory speech by Sherwood Anderson before a plenary session of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The current campaign seems aimed at driving Solzhenitsyn out of Russia, much as Gogol was obliged to leave and live in Rome. Some writers of conscience, notably the poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko, are said to have appealed to the writers' union to ask it to review its expulsion of Solzhenitsyn. The writer, meanwhile, is living in Russia and writing but not publishing there.

The least one can say of it is that it is in the great Russian tradition of attempted —and, one might add, unsuccessful—suppression of genius.

International Opinion

Divorce in Italy

The bill to legalize divorce in Italy is mild by the standards of most other European countries . . . Italy has reached a stage of social development in which public opinion no longer accepts the absolute sacrosanctity of marriage.

It is now argued that the new divorce bill is in conflict with the Concordat, and that it is therefore unconstitutional. Should the Constitutional Court invalidate the bill, then the whole weight of lay and left-wing opinion which supported the bill might turn to campaign for the Lateran treaty's abrogation. The Italian church might then learn, as the French church has learned, that it is possible to survive and even to flourish in separation from the state.

—From The Times (London).

A Political Antiquity

The Alto Adige agreement between the Italian and Austrian foreign ministers offers a new chance to liquidate from European history a politically silly antiquity. It was about time.

If it be terrorism that drove Italy's Aldo Moro and his Austrian colleague (Kurt) Waldstein to the conference table, then this is the gratifying result of activity that is objectionable in every way . . . The prolongation of minority problems such as South Tyrol does not make sense anymore. A genuine, realistic arrangement will be the death of terrorism.

—From De Volkskrant (Amsterdam).

Springboks Protests

In South Africa there is deep concern over the manner in which Harold Wilson and his government are indirectly encouraging opposition to the Springboks rugby team. The target of Wilson and his colleagues is apparently to discourage further visits by South African sports teams to Britain.

The mass demonstration Wednesday in Manchester and the cowardly attack on Dr. Hendrik Luttig, our dignified ambassador in Britain, were both encouraged by the knowledge that members of the British government persistently attack South Africa, its domestic policy and sports teams in the sharpest language.

Actions of the British government are damaging British interests in South Africa no matter whether Wilson realizes this or not. The British government wants our trade but [in other matters] it tramples on us.

—From Die Transvaler (Johannesburg).

PARIS—People have for some time been accustomed to look upon the improved relations between France and Germany as a final and accomplished fact. Unfortunately this is by no means the case, and the slightest incident, of no apparent importance, suffices to prove to all the world that the understanding is merely superficial. It is plain that, whenever indiscretions have been committed in France, the Germans have risen to the fly with a promptitude which cannot but cause alarm.

NEW YORK—The real object of De Valera's visit to the United States, according to some critics here, was disclosed yesterday when the "First President of the Irish Republic" announced that a campaign was about to be opened to float a $10,000,000 bond certificate issue of the Republic of Ireland next January. Frank P. Walsh will be the national director and prominent Irish-Americans will open various headquarters throughout the country. Ireland has called her sons.

Finch's Bid for the Senate

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON.—The first major change in the Nixon cabinet now depends upon the health, plus the will to run again, of California's aging, ailing Republican senator, George Murphy.

If the movie actor-politician agrees to step aside, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert Finch will run for the Senate seat Murphy now holds. Leading California Republicans have been pressing Sen. Murphy to yield to Mr. Finch, on the ground that his throat tumor will make it very difficult for Sen. Murphy to campaign effectively for re-election.

As usual in such cases, the problem is both delicate and complicated. At 67, Sen. Murphy is spunkily courageous. His doctors have assured him that the growth in his throat, though inoperable, is wholly benign. Yet he cannot speak much above a whisper, and the Senate has therefore given him special permission—the first on record—to use a portable amplifier in the Senate chamber.

Much in Demand

He does not wish to withdraw. Though he always has to use special amplifying apparatus, he is much in demand on the right-wing political lecture circuit. By using the same system, he believes that he can solve his campaigning problem.

As of now, therefore, Mr. Finch's departure from the Nixon cabinet does not appear likely. Yet one cannot tell, as yet, whether the pressure on Sen. Murphy to withdraw will continue to build up until he gives way to it. The uncertainty lies in the always unknowable trend of the polls.

California's careful Field poll already shows Mr. Finch running substantially better than Sen. Murphy against California's three most probable Democratic senatorial nominees. These are president S. I. Hayakawa of San Francisco State College, Rep. John V. Tunney, and former Attorney General Stanley Mosk.

Of these three, it is significant that Dr. Hayakawa makes far the best showing against both Sen. Murphy and Mr. Finch. Being tough with student militants—which is how Dr. Hayakawa emerged from academic obscurity—plainly has very great voter appeal. The November Field poll gave Mr. Finch 48 percent against Dr. Hayakawa's 39 percent and Sen. Murphy 46 percent against Dr. Hayakawa's 40 percent, with the rest "don't know" in both cases. Considering the senator's handicap, Dr. Hayakawa would therefore have a good chance of beating Sen. Murphy, whereas he would have a very uphill race against Mr. Finch.

If later polls move in a manner unfavorable to Sen. Murphy, therefore, the pressure for his withdrawal is bound to increase. The White House, which has a vital interest in the outcome of the 1970 elections to the Senate, could even be led to take a hand.

Yet what makes this situation interesting, at bottom, is the fairly obvious eagerness of the most conspicuous and able liberal Republican in the Nixon cabinet to exchange his cabinet place for a Senate seat. This by no means implies any loosening of the strong personal ties between Secretary Finch and President Nixon.

Mr. Finch's aim has always been to return to elective politics, and his intention to do so in 1970, if Sen. Murphy will only step aside, can therefore be over-interpreted. Yet the fact has to be faced that the Nixon administration's present trend is rightward, and this conservative tendency will surely be accentuated if Mr. Finch departs.

Again, this conservative tendency, though real enough, can too easily be exaggerated. All reasonably sharp-eyed observers were always aware that Attorney General John Mitchell was the "Iron Chancellor" of the present cabinet. Those who now speak of Mr. Mitchell's "emergence" as the "Nixon administration's strong man" are merely admitting, by implication, their own early blindness to the real state of affairs.

Mitchell Allies

But there are other symptoms, like the recent total centralization of the entire White House staff operation, with the exception of the Foreign Affairs Department, under the stern control of H. R. Haldeman and Robert Erlichman, who are, in turn, close Mitchell allies. And important political moves have also been made—most notably, the President's decision to use Vice-President Spiro Agnew to lead the attack on the liberals and left-wingers.

All this is causing howls and anguish and indignant outcries about "polarization." But it seems a little late in the day to be waxing indignant, because the Nixon administration is turning out to be what every sensible man always expected.

After all, most of the howlers and outcriers did their snide, highly effective best to cut the guts out of Hubert Humphrey, and they thereby gave the country its present President.

The Rope Trick

By C. L. Sulzberger

HELSINKI.—If you except one arm of northernmost Norway, Finland is the only European country touching the Soviet Union which is not governed by a Communist regime. Its social and economic systems are based on free enterprise; its politics embrace several parties; its trade is diversified; and even its heavy weapons are purchased from both East and West.

As long ago as 1949, in Stalin's menacing time, President Paasikivi, this country's great postwar statesman, told me: "Our position has always been and of course remains pro-Western despite our geographic proximity to Russia." Today's president, Urho Kekkonen, Paasikivi's protégé, insists that this is still the case.

That is to say, although Finland is linked by treaty with the U.S.S.R. in which each pledges to consult the other in case of war with Germany or its allies, the Finns regard themselves as neutral. Even Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko employed that word at the UN's current Assembly.

Kekkonen, an athlete and ski enthusiast who is in astonishingly fine condition for his 69 years, likes to say: "Some people in the West find it hard to believe that Finland can follow the policy it is following with such success and independence. They think it is like the Indian rope trick."

Worker for Peace

The president is obviously aware that his critics grumble he is too willing to follow the Kremlin's lead. He scoffs at this. "If we pursue a policy in our own national interests," he says, "we cannot abandon it just because others complain that it might be in Soviet interests."

Not surprisingly, Kekkonen's main obsession is pressing for world peace and he is naturally delighted that the SALT arms limitation negotiations chose Helsinki for their first session. Under Finland's constitution the president is directly responsible for foreign policy and he evidently relishes this aspect of his role. He says:

"In order to promote development of peace Finland has suggested three moves:: (1)—the creation of a nuclear free zone in all Scandinavia; (2)—the demilitarization of the border area of Norway and the Soviet Union where the two blocs (NATO and the Warsaw Pact) meet; and (3)—the holding of a European security conference in Helsinki."

Obviously none of these suggestions is displeasing to the Russians who have urged similar ideas for years, either directly or through friendly capitals. But no one can argue with Kekkonen's contention that the proposals suit Finland's own desires.

Russia is neither historically nor currently popular with the Finnish general public. Nevertheless the president's logic that geography and power relationships dictate exceptional friendship with Moscow is now widely accepted.

There are many legends of the exceptional courage and fighting prowess of these people but one heard frequently nowadays is about two Finns boasting in a bar. Says the first: "Of course one Finn is equal to ten Russians." Says the second: "Naturally. But what happens when the eleventh Russian comes along?"

Saved Lenin's Life

Kekkonen himself believes that there is a growing Russo-Finnish personal bond. He adduces this rather odd example: "The Finns had very close relations with Lenin between 1905 and 1917 and several times they saved Lenin's life. The Russians are a sentimental people and they remember this."

Despite the dour appearance of his rugged frame and naked-shaven head, Kekkonen is a sentimentalist. Although he does everything possible to insure a smooth course of Soviet relations, it is well known he twice tried to see the disgraced Khrushchev during Russian visits. He knew this was unpopular with Khrushchev's successors but he had liked him enormously. Each time he was politely rebuffed.

The essence of Kekkonen's philosophy is that there can be everywhere the kind of amiable coexistence prevailing between Communist Russia and its tiny capitalistic neighbor; that it is not necessary to change ideologies or social systems to obtain friendship.

For centuries, he recalls, dynamic Islam fought dynamic Christianity. Finally both wearied of religious war and grew to accept each other without trying to impose their respective credos. Likewise, today, he says: "It is possible to have Communism and capitalism coexist peacefully and effectively without either one changing its system—along those very same lines that developed over the years between Christianity and Islam."

A Dubious Bargain

Tax Bill and Crime

By David S. Broder

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Last week's report from the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence makes a point that is terribly pertinent to the current Senate debate on the tax bill—a point that has been largely overlooked.

The commission, headed by Dr. Milton Eisenhower, in its study of "crime in the streets," the epidemic of violence that afflicts the major cities and fosters the politics of fear, said there are only two ways of dealing with the problem.

Either society and government will make the expenditure of public funds needed to combat crime and to eliminate its causes or individual families will buy as much protection for themselves as they can afford.

The consequences of the choice are enormous—and the tax bill is an important part of the choice, because it represents the biggest decision on national priorities Congress will make this year.

In its present form (even without the additional tax-reduction amendments Sen. Albert Gore is sponsoring) it embodies a political compromise to procure a limited amount of tax reform at a substantial cost in federal revenues.

$9 Billion in Cuts

The reforms—many of them worthwhile in themselves—would bring the government something over $6 billion a year of extra revenue, when fully implemented. At the same time, it is proposed that more than $9 billion a year of tax cuts be granted. About $625 million of the cuts would go to poor families, who would be relieved of their income tax obligations by the bill. But the vast bulk of the tax relief would go into the pockets of the middle and upper-income families as a subsidy to further private consumption.

It is this decision to give private spending priority over public investment that has largely escaped challenge in congressional debate. Belatedly, the administration and some members of the Joint Economic Committee have questioned the inflationary aspects of the scheduled tax cuts. But few voices have been heard from either party challenging the basic assumption that private spending has priority over public.

Yet that question must be raised when one considers the Eisenhower commission's description of what the "private spending" solution to the crime problem means to the future of our country.

If individuals are left to cope with the problem of providing safety for themselves, the commission says, central business districts will be inhabited only during daytime "and will be largely e except for police patrols nighttime hours.

"High-rise apartment b and residential compounds, ed by private guards and devices, will be fortified c upper-middle and high populations living at min tions in the cities. . ."

'Oriental' Victims

Lt. William Calley, according to the Herald Tribune of Nov. 25, is to stand trial for premeditated murder of more than 100 villagers in Vietnam. The charges against Lt. Calley, as drafted by the U.S. Army, identify the victims as "Oriental human beings." The choice of the term "Oriental" is significant. It suggests that, for the U.S. Army leadership 20 months after the slaughter, there remains a basic difference between killing "Orientals" and, say, white Americans.

Racial attitudes of this sort helped to provide the background for the kind of war crimes with which Lt. Calley is charged. Since these attitudes persist, and since large U.S. forces continue to operate in Vietnam, such crimes are likely to go right on occurring.

One of your readers (Kate McCorquodale, Nov. 29-30) recently spoke in the Letters column of two soldiers who were present at the alleged My Lai massacre but refused to participate in it. She wondered what in their background had "kept these two men human."

Their behavior was indeed unusual, but to imply that the other soldiers present had failed to remain human seems to me tragically to miss the point. If, as alleged, there was a general slaughter of women and children at My Lai, then the men responsible for it were behaving in an eminently human fashion, as even the most cursory reading of history (including American history and the history of the 20th century) amply demonstrates.

It does none of us any good to pretend that eruptions of violence are somehow not "human"—when, in fact, it is precisely such violence that (among many other things) distinguishes Man from other animals. When The New York Times, in its editorial of Dec. 1, speaks of the "bestial" instincts unleashed by war, it is doing a considerable injustice to beasts.

The lesson of My Lai, I think, is not that men sometimes cease to be "human," but that, being human, we must somehow find a way to survive our own humanity.

Hopefully, the revelation of American atrocities in Vietnam will arouse the Great Silent Majority into demanding American withdrawal, but past experience does not justify optimism. The Great Silent Majority has already lost 40,000 of its husbands and sons, and its grief has been bottled in private bitterness and resignation.

The administration's feelings will be revealed not in its proclamations of horror, nor even in righteous prosecution of the triggermen, but in how it explains the lapse between the acts and their exposure. After all, the German high command didn't do its own killing.

Pro-War Costs

Last Saturday the Trib brought the news about four Southern congressmen who introduced legislation that would require leaders of anti-war demonstrations to post bonds covering costs of extra police and cleaning up.

We feel that such legislation would be acceptable only if the four congressmen agreed to foot the bill of the pro-war demonstration that has been going on for so long in Vietnam.

Lodge's Departure

The almost adulatory comments about Henry Cabot Lodge by C.L. Sulzberger and others seem to call for some comment to set the matter in perspective. I have no desire to inject ad hominem remarks into discussion about Vietnam. No doubt Mr. Lodge acts out of sincerity and tries to serve his country. But there also is no doubt about his extreme, doctrinaire inflexibility.

It is, of course, primarily policies rather than diplomats which determine the outcome t tions. One does not re whether either the Am the Vietnamese would agreed to anything. But that few men less likel come to an agreement Vietnamese opponents c been found. If Mr. Ni wanted an accord at Pa Henry Cabot Lodge as negotiator was not the about it.

Neither preaching nor protesting, the author simply submits the evidence and lets the spectator draw the conclusions. The writing is clear and strong, shot through with keen observation and ironic contemplation. The result is not merely photographic and phonographic reproduction, but a living, breathing slice of penitentiary life.

The types encountered here are familiar. But they are convincingly realized and emerge as creatures of flesh and blood whose problems and activities constantly engage one's attention.

There is only a vague outline of any plot. The play begins with the arrival in the prison of a young felon and we accompany him as he serves his sentence from the moment he is issued his prison uniform until he discards it to go back "outside" at the final curtain.

Some scenes are grim but often they are ribaldly humorous. When at the end he goes forth, one is inclined to agree with his guardians that he will be back again.

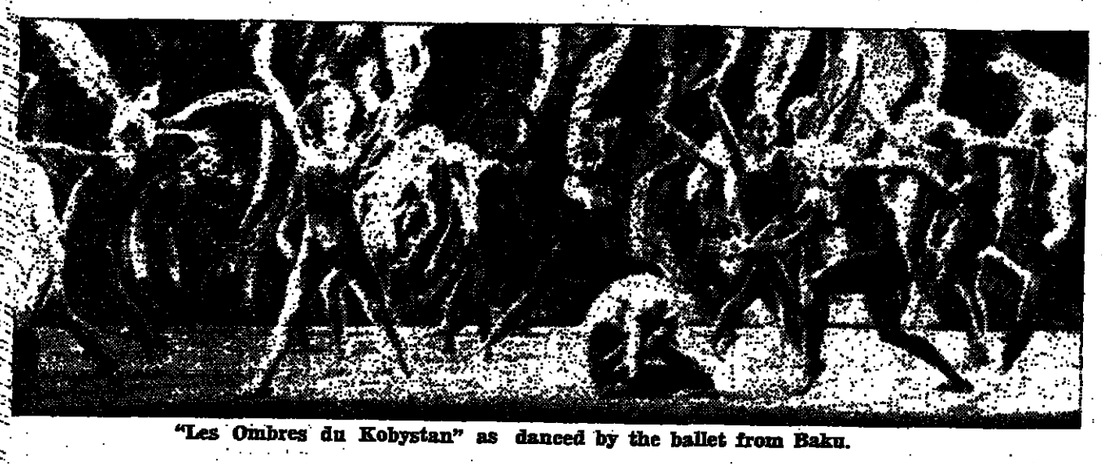

Kem Campbell's staging of the Norman script is efficient on all counts, a clean-cut job. A brisk pace is maintained linking the collection of short scenes. And the scenes themselves unfold effectively. The casting is tip-top. Outstanding are Ronald Lewis as the tyrant of the cell-block, Tom Chadbon as the young prisoner, Nigel Hawthorne as the matter-of-fact governor and Glen Williams as the neurotic captive. There is a brief and admirable bit by Christine Noonan, remembered from the film "If," as the faithless sweetheart paying a visit to her ex-beau. But all the members of the large company contribute to the abiding sense of reality.

In production, Norman's richly human and often very funny play receives a documentary framing—with movie sub-titles introducing episodes in the Brecht manner—but this clinical treatment fails to subdue the sardonic humor that brightens this arresting investigation of contemporary prisons and prisoners.

aris Dance Festival Ending on Mixed Note

David Stevens

Dec. 2.—To say that rogram ending the e Festival this week l bag would be put- ldly.

was the ballet com- he opera of Baku, the Soviet republic aijan, which filled larger part of the with three presum- esentative selections nique repertory. In ese came three brief, brief, classic pas de deux presented by two sets of stars from Moscow's Bolshoi and Leningrad's Kirov Theaters.

It was as if someone had decided that a whole program of exotica from Azerbaijan would not be enough to sustain the evening, and that may be right. A program note says that the Baku company, formed 30 years ago, is based on a fusion of regional, semi-Oriental folklore and the classic school of Russian dance, using scores by native composers.

Yet, in the ballets presented last night at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées, the folklore seemed strangely pale stuff for a region that evokes thoughts of Scythians and Tatars and the like. And while the dancing was pleasant enough, it gave very little indication of what the company might do in more familiar repertory.

The opener, billed here as "Les Ombres du Kobystan," had to do with man taming the elements, but came over like a wan evocation of "The Rite of Spring," while "Caspian Ballad" merely showed that the rigors of constructing an oil rig in the Caspian Sea are not very congenial material for a ballet. The company really seemed at home, however, in a foot-stomping, whirling, high-spirited "Azerbaijan Suite," a pleasant example of the kind of popular folklore made familiar in the West by such companies as Moiseyev's. Meanwhile, Nina Sorokina and Yuri Vladimirov of the Bolshoi tossed off a pas de deux from "Esmeralda," a piece of circus exhibitionism performed with breathtaking pyrotechnics, and Natalia Makarova and Sergei Vikulov of the Kirov showed that company's more lyric style in the all-too-brief "Valse" of Shostakovich and the pas de deux from "Giselle."

Wagner's Ring in Rouen

ROUEN.—One of the nice things for an opera-lover living in Paris is that one of the most serious and ambitious lyric theaters in France is in this Norman capital, little more than an hour away by train.

Thus it is that for the last three Sundays, and presumably for the next one, the 10 a.m. Paris-Rouen train has been something of a Nibelungen special, carrying a flock of Wagner-starved Parisians to the attractive Théâtre des Arts—like so many German houses rebuilt from postwar ruins—where "Der Ring des Nibelungen" has been unfolding in Bayreuthian leisure. Bayreuthian too are the hot discussions at intermission and the summonses to take one's seat—by the playing of a Ring leitmotiv rather than the brusque insistence of a buzzer or bell.

Fortunately, the goings on inside the theater, to judge by last Sunday's "Siegfried," are by no means a letdown. The imported cast was composed largely of veteran first-string Wagnerians, the production—by a German stage director, Manfred Hübricht, and the theater's own designer, Roger Gaujoin—was uneven but original, and above all the reinforced Rouen orchestra under Paul Ethuin, despite some betrayals in the brass department, distinguished itself.

The production, given the probable limitations of rehearsal and economy, seemed to embody a number of compromises. The sets involved some stage furniture to suggest everything from Mime's cave to Brünnhilde's rock, with projections that produced everything from German expressionism to a dragon that might have been borrowed from a Superman comic strip. The action was kept simple, even static, which may have been just as well considering the Stygian gloom on the stage most of the time. Yet despite the vagaries of the staging, the essentials were in place and allowed the musical performance to carry the day.

Gustav Neidlinger as Alberich and John Lanigan as Mime were the vocal nucleus of this "Siegfried"—both in excellent voice and giving detailed characterizations. Jef Vermeersch sang smoothly, but made rather a lightweight Wanderer, while Heinz Hagenau was appropriately cavernous as Fafner. Ludmila Dvorakova is such a handsome Brünnhilde that it minimized her struggles with pitch in her difficult final, and only, scene. Last, and unfortunately least, the Siegfried of Hans Hopf is certainly experienced, but so bumptiously portrayed and choppily sung as to emphasize all the role's negative qualities.

—DAVID STEVENS

The Ballet Rambert opened a season at the Jeanetta Cochrane Theater in London Nov. 28 with the world première of "Blind-Sight" by Norman Morrice, artistic director of the company. The opening program that included this ballet and three others, "George Frideric," "Rilcercare" and "Deserts" will be repeated Dec. 3. "Blind-Sight" will be repeated on a program with "Ziggurat," "The Act" and "Freefall" from Dec. 9 through 13, when the season ends.

Italian Opera Season Opens

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, Dec. 2.—Last year the Italian opera season opened dramatically, with demonstrations, spectators sprayed with paint, cars overturned, and general protest. This year, despite the atmosphere of strikes and vague unrest in the country, the opera houses have managed—so far—to begin their year untroubled.

For example, Florence's Teatro Comunale presented a new staging of Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" last weekend. It had many merits, dominated by the attractive singing of Helga Dernesch as Senta and by the generally convincing, brilliant, even feverish conducting of Georges Prêtre.

Wagner, in German, was a somewhat unconventional choice for the season's first opera here, but in Rome last week the Teatro dell'Opera opened with an even more daring selection, a seldom given Verdi work, his fourth opera, "I Lombardi." First presented triumphantly at La Scala in 1843, "I Lombardi" died out of the repertory during the last century and has had only one or two tepid revivals in the past decades.

The opera is generally dismissed as a mere remake of Verdi's preceding, successful "Nabucco"; and there are many similarities between the two works. Undeniably, "Nabucco" is superior, but even when not at his supreme best, Verdi is never unexciting, and "I Lombardi" is a rich feast of Verdian tunes. It is also surprisingly sophisticated orchestrally, as conductor Gianandrea Gavazzeni amply proved by his impassioned reading.

"I Lombardi" has a real problem—the libretto, which not only has silly words but is also virtually plotless. Luigi Squarzina's imaginative staging overcame this obstacle through a magically unrealistic presentation. The opera's true protagonist, the chorus, was visibly seated on the stage all evening, while on a central cross-shaped platform, dancers and supers symbolically, economically indicated in mime the meaning of the choral pieces.

Renata Scotto won applause by the unaffected taste of her vocalism and by her wise renunciation of overacting. This star soprano in the past two years has radically simplified her style, with laudable results. Tenor Luciano Pavarotti was especially winning in his bright opening aria and in the hushed vision scene. After a slightly shaky opening scene, basso Ruggero Raimondi was also in fine form. The smaller roles were all strongly cast, and Pier Luigi Pizzi's costumes and visual solutions to the opera's thorny problems contributed to a first-rate evening.

The Duke and His Men

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Duke Ellington and his band played the last two concerts of their European tour at Bournemouth on Sunday. They were to be in Detroit on Monday and in Las Vegas today. A typical week in the life of Duke Ellington.

The Duke is, to be sure, only 70. In the world of the symphony orchestra nobody makes much of a septuagenarian. Eugene Ormandy and Karl Boehm both reached 70 this year. But Stokowski is going strong at 87. Otto Klemperer and Vittorio Gui are 84. Sir Adrian Boult is 80. Pierre Monteux was conducting at 89 and Toscanini at 88. No wonder that Ellington shows annoyance when asked about his plans for retirement.

But there are considerable differences between conducting a symphony orchestra and leading a great jazz band. Conducting an orchestra requires the greater physical exertion at rehearsal and performance. The jazz band leader has the tougher life, particularly as leader of his own self-sustaining organization, since what makes it self-sustaining is constant touring, with two concerts a night, and with the leader composing just about everything the band plays.

It's the only life Edward Kennedy Ellington has ever known, or wanted to know. It's also the only life some of his men have known. And somehow, at the first of his two London concerts Saturday night, I found myself thinking as much about the men as about the Duke. A vital element in his genius as a composer and arranger has been his ability to tailor his instrumentation to the genius of his players—and to attract and hold players of genius.

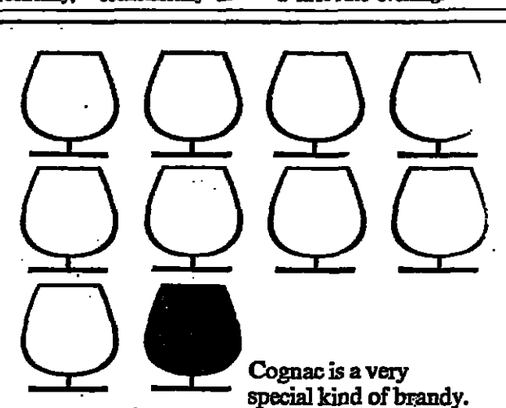

Harry Carney, for instance, who practically invented the baritone sax. He will be 60 next April and has been with Ellington since he was 16. Others in the present line-up, such as Lawrence Brown at 64, Johnny Hodges at 63, Cootie Williams and Russell Procope at 61, Cat Anderson at 54 and Paul Gonsalves at a mere 49, have been in and out of the band over the years, more often in than out.

The Duke gave us ample opportunity to savor their unique virtuosity. There was Hodges, doing a "Black Butterfly" of unexampled delicacy, and then, suddenly, booting the band along, getting more punch out of his alto than most men get from a tenor. There was Cat Anderson playing the lead trumpet on "Satin Doll" about two octaves above where any other trumpeter would have been. And, of course, Carney laying down the foundation upon which all else is built.

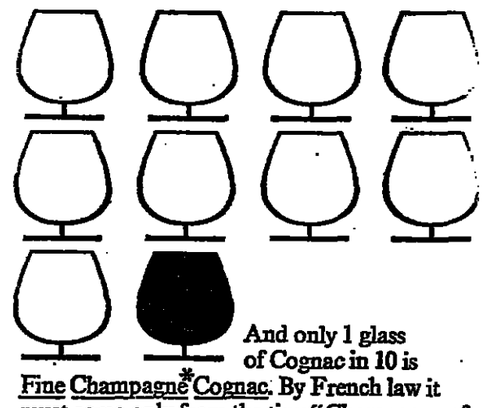

If one could have had any reservations about this concert it would have been that the soloists were favored at the expense of the band as a whole. But that was scant grounds for complaint. These Ellington veterans have been among the greatest instrumentalists of the century, and they are part and parcel of the Ellington accomplishment and the Ellington legend.

Including the Duke himself. He has never been a piano virtuoso in any conventional sense. But simply by knowing when and where to put it, he can make more exciting music with just his middle finger than most pianists can make with all the fingers of two hands.

Not how many notes, but which notes, and when—that's what musical composition is all about, and always has been. If you want to experience how it works, just listen to the Duke—and his men!

The statement continued: "The Belgian and Dutch representatives agreed that their unions would resist any such permanent transfer."

But Jack Jones, secretary of the British Transport and General Workers Union, said the Belgian and Dutch longshoremen would continue to handle the OCL-Associated Container Transportation traffic which is at present being ferried across the North Sea to Rotterdam and Antwerp.

Any resistance would not come until there were signs—physical signs—the move was to be permanent, Mr. Jones said.

Mr. Jones declined today to say how a permanent move would be resisted.

The consortium has not made any official announcement of its long-term plans.

U.S. Experts See Liquidity Crunch

By Carl Gewirtz

LONDON, Dec. 2. — Leading private economists voiced divided opinions on the outlook for the U.S. economy at an international parley here today. But all were agreed that there is an impending liquidity crunch that could test the solvency of many American companies.

In a speech this evening, Federal Reserve Board governor Sherman J. Maisel said only that "a majority of economists believe that actions already taken mean that demand pressures will, over the next several quarters, continue to slacken, thus creating favorable implications for prices and the foreign trade balance."

Mr. Maisel agreed that there is "some possibility of financial crisis in individual markets."

But he said "I hope, I am convinced that the Fed will not sit back and allow any major financial institutions or markets to go to the wall."

William H. Chartener, vice-president and economist for Goldman, Sachs and Co. and assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs in the Johnson administration, forecast there will be no recession in the United States next year and little abatement of inflationary pressures.

But Henry Kaufman, partner and economist at Salomon Brothers and Hutzler, and Albert M. Wojnilower, vice-president and economist at First Boston Corp., took the opposite view.

The Wall Street advisers made their observations at the second session of the European institutional investors' conference here.

Mr. Kaufman declared that "a mild but sustained business recession . . . seems near at hand." Mr. Wojnilower said that "since mid-year the American economy has, at a minimum, leveled off. Most likely, it is already some months into a recession."

Liquidity Question

Mr. Kaufman also talked about "the most disturbing aspect" of the "very substantial lowering of liquidity standards by both borrowers and lenders. Business corporations have resorted to a large volume of short-term financing through banks and through the issuance of commercial paper and they have also converted liquid assets into cash. . . .

"Among our financial institutions, illiquidity is most noticeable at commercial banks which have [incurred] a large volume of non-deposit liabilities."

He warned that "the stamina of the Fed to persist with traditional measures of restraint will be severely tested in the next few weeks as the financial demands remain strong and pockets of liquidity continue to be eliminated. Unless the economic slowdown accelerates or the confidence of the private sector is shaken more than it has been up to now, the Fed may well have to intervene selectively in the marketplace to head off a financial storm."

Mr. Wojnilower agreed that "there is a small but not negligible chance for a crisis." Mr. Chartener, although seeing the same potential danger, noted that "the Fed is sufficiently on top of the situation so that we won't have a monetary panic in the United States."

Mr. Chartener also differed with his colleagues over the outlook for corporate profits. He estimated they would decline next year by 8 to 10 percent from 1969 levels.

Mr. Kaufman, however, predicted that "there will probably be a delayed recognition that the profit squeeze is worse than had been originally anticipated . . . I suspect that you will hear estimates of [declines of] at least 15 to 20 percent."

Both he and Mr. Wojnilower agreed that a subsequent recovery in profits would be gradual and "less spectacular" than is widely anticipated.

"Monetary policy is no push-button machine," Mr. Wojnilower warned, and a let-up in the Fed's tight credit policies will bring no sudden change in the profit outlook.

"Barring a new war, it is likely to be some years before federal spending or business capital goods purchases revive to the extent that would regenerate inflationary pressures or a recovery in profits—or interest rates—to the levels of late 1968 and early 1969," he said.

For his part, Mr. Kaufman stated that "I feel that the profits, after bottoming out, will recover only gradually. . . . We will not have the usual cyclical benefits for a quick profit recovery unless we go into a deep recession."

'Mini-Recession' In U.S. Seen by Japanese Agency

TOKYO, Dec. 2 (AP).—The U.S. economy may suffer a "mini-recession" in the early 1970s that may set off a chain reaction in Japan and Western Europe, according to Japan's Economic Planning Agency.

The Kyodo News Service said today the agency made the prediction in its annual report on world economy and presented it to a meeting of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's cabinet.

It cited such factors as:

- The U.S. government, under President Nixon's administration, is planning emphasis on price stabilization policies rather than economic growth.
- The Federal Reserve Board is reflecting on its bitter experience of taking an excessively easy monetary policy in the second half of 1968.

Free Gold Price Sinks to $35.30

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP).—The price of gold on the free market here fell 25 cents to $35.30 an ounce this afternoon—lowest since the two-tier price system was introduced in April, 1968.

The previous low was set at $35.35 last Tuesday.

Dealers have cited growing confidence in the world's major currencies as a general reason for the recent decline in gold prices. Commercial buyers were also holding back in the hope of further falls.

The free-market price now stands only 30 cents over the $35-an-ounce official fixed rate at which the world's central banks exchange the metal.

Brimmer Still Pessimistic On Inflation

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Federal Reserve Board governor Andrew F. Brimmer said today monetary strings must be kept tight until inflation is checked.

This need was made even more pressing because of the declining contribution which fiscal policy was making to the overall stabilization effort, Mr. Brimmer said in a speech prepared for delivery before a business conference here.

He also said a further rise in unemployment was unavoidable if price stability was to be restored.

Still Unaccomplished

Mr. Brimmer said that although monetary policy has moderated the rate of expansion through restricting the availability of credit, the basic objective of checking accelerating inflation still has not been accomplished.

"On the basis of my own assessment of recent economic trends and the outlook during the months ahead, I think we still have to win the battle against inflation," he said.

The Fed governor made it clear that he spoke only for himself and not for the other members of the board.

Mr. Brimmer called a rising unemployment rate "an unfortunate" product of the effort to check inflation, but said public policies should be modified to keep the burden from falling on those least able to bear it rather than to pretend the problem can be avoided.

COLOGNE, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Ford-Werke AG said today it has raised its vehicle prices by up to 5.7 percent effective immediately.

Nixon Fires FNMA President; Lapin Says He Will Fight Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—A White House spokesman said today President Nixon plans to replace Raymond H. Lapin, president of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

No reason for Mr. Lapin's dismissal was given by assistant press secretary Jerry Warren and no date was set. Mr. Lapin has served as the head of the government-sponsored private mortgage corporation since July, 1967.

Mr. Lapin later confirmed that he had been fired by President Nixon, but said he would fight the action.

Mr. Lapin told a press conference he received a letter from President Nixon last night informing him "you are hereby removed for good cause from the office of the president of the Federal National Mortgage Association."

He said the President's letter did not give any specific reason for relieving him of his duties.

Mr. Lapin charged at the news conference that officials at the Department of Housing and Urban Development had offered him a "deal" if he would agree to retire by Dec. 31.

HUD officials reportedly told him that if he left by the end of December "things would be pleasant," but otherwise they would not.

Mr. Lapin said his job, paying $85,000 a year, was "the juiciest plum at the President's disposal." Also, he said, FNMA shareholders will be able to elect a new board and a new president as early as next May when the organization becomes private.

"I can understand why the President wishes quickly to place his own man in my job so that he might be able to prepare himself to run for office on a management slate." Mr. Lapin charged, but "FNMA is not part of the spoils system to be plucked by a President at will."

Dun & Bradstreet to Merge With Corinthian Broadcasting

By John J. Abele

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT).—Dun & Bradstreet Inc., the huge business-information complex, and Corinthian Broadcasting Corp., controlled by John Hay Whitney, announced yesterday that they had agreed in principle to merge.

The terms of the merger proposal provide for an exchange of stock with a market value of about $134 million. Mr. Whitney owns about 48 percent of Corinthian's 3.4 million outstanding shares, for each of which Dun & Bradstreet will exchange 0.675 of a share of its stock.

Dun & Bradstreet is thus offering about a 54 percent premium over the market value of Corinthian stock.

Corinthian owns and operates television stations in Houston, Texas; Tulsa, Okla.; Sacramento, Calif.; and Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, Ind. All are affiliates of the CBS television network. The company also owns Standard Reference Library, which publishes and distributes encyclopedias, and Corinthian Editions Inc., which publishes books sponsored by businesses and institutions.

In the fiscal year ended April 30, Corinthian had net income of $4.2 million, or $1.25 a share, on revenues of $35.5 million.

Dun & Bradstreet had net income of $19.2 million, or $1.85 a share, on revenues of $258.1 million in 1968. The company derives the bulk of its revenues from its business-information division, which provides statistics and services in such fields as research, credit, sales, finance, marketing and economics. It also publishes educational and specialized journals including Dun's Review, a monthly magazine.

The companies' announcement said the merger agreement was subject to approval by the boards of directors and stockholders of both companies and by the Federal Communications Commission.

Elsewhere on the merger front, Sherwin-Williams Co., the world's largest producer of paints, announced that it had made a $60 million offer for the stock of Berger, Jenson & Nicholson Ltd., a British paint manufacturer.

Morgan, Grenfell & Co., British merchant bankers serving as financial adviser to Sherwin-Williams, said Berger directors would recommend acceptance of the offer, which provides for a payment of $1.44 a share for the 40.22 million shares of Berger stock. Morgan, Grenfell also said that Celanese Corp., which owns about 29 percent of Berger's stock, had agreed to accept the Sherwin-Williams offer.

Last month, Farbwerke Hoechst, A.G., a large West German chemical manufacturer, said it intended to make a bid for Berger. The German company said Reed Group Ltd., a British paper manufacturing company, would have the right to acquire one-half of the Berger stock acquired by Hoechst.

The Sherwin-Williams offer would be contingent upon the receipt of enough Berger shares to give it a 50 percent interest. Earlier this year, Sherwin-Williams acquired its first operation in Europe, a paint plant in the Netherlands.

Hoechst Studies

FRANKFURT, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—A Farbwerke Hoechst spokesman said today the company is discussing the bid by the Sherwin-Williams Co. for Berger, Jenson and Nicholson Ltd.

The spokesman said no decision on whether or not Hoechst will increase its original offer can be expected immediately.

In London, the chairman of Reed Paper, S.T. Ryder, said of the Sherwin-Williams offer "it seems a very high price is being paid."

Mitsui, Hoechst Form Joint Cosmetic Firm

TOKYO, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Mitsui Petrochemical Co. said today it has formed a joint venture in Japan with Farbwerke Hoechst AG to import and manufacture cosmetic products for the Japanese market.

The new firm, Loumar Cosmetics KK, is capitalized at $280,000 of which 60 percent is provided by the Japanese firm and the rest by Hoechst.

N.Y. Prices Fall Again; Dow Breaks 1969 Low

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT).—With a minimum of fanfare, prices on the New York Stock Exchange sank today to their lowest levels in nearly three years, as measured by its most popular barometer.

The Dow Jones industrial average, after repeated tests since midsummer, finally went below this year's closing low of 801.96 on July 29. But the breakthrough was by an eyelash.

The Dow industrials, under modest pressure throughout the session, declined 3.69 to finish at 801.35.

This marks the lowest closing since January, 1967, for this indicator comprising 30 big-name blue chips.

Reaction Mild

While acknowledging the new low in the industrial average, Wall Street analysts noted that the latest penetration—less than a full point—was hardly spectacular. Others pointed to the continuing low volume as an encouraging sign and there were analysts, too, who tag the market as "over-sold" on a technical basis and perhaps ready for a rally.

Whatever the future holds for the stock market, the fact remains that in the 15 trading days since cresting on Nov. 10 the Dow industrials have tumbled 61.70.

The main force behind this decline has been a credit squeeze of unprecedented proportions for the U.S. economy.

Other popular stock averages moved downward. The Dow Jones railroad average, reacting to a possible strike of the nation's railroads by shop-craft unions at 12:01 tomorrow, slipped to its lowest reading since October, 1966.

Utility averages, with corporate borrowing rates at a peak, also dropped.

The market's weakness reflected a lack of willing buyers, rather than any severe selling pressure.

Volume stood at 9.94 million shares, virtually matching yesterday's slow turnover of 9.95 million shares.

Some big-name stocks sold at their lowest prices in many years. U.S. Steel, off 1/8 to 35, traded at 34 3/4, its lowest price for nearly 15 years. Du Pont, down 1 1/4 to 107, sold at 106 3/4, its lowest quotation in more than a decade.

Appearing on the active list along with "Big Steel" were General Motors, up 3/8 to 70 5/8, and American Telephone, down 5/8 to 51. Earlier in the session, General Motors registered a new 1969 low of 70.

Major oils, depressed recently, were mixed today. Jersey Standard gained 3/8 to 61 3/8. Atlantic Richfield 7/8 to 92 5/8. Texaco and Gulf were fractionally lower while Standard Oil of California was unchanged at 50.

Indiana Standard, off two points at 48 5/8, said its exchange offer of 1.4 million Jersey Standard shares in exchange for its own stock was oversubscribed.

The few computer and glamour issues that showed signs of initiating a rally included University Computing, which gained 1 1/4 to 95 3/8 after losing more than five yesterday. Control Data rose 1 1/8 to 117 and Memorex closed unchanged at 163 1/2 but traded as high as 166 1/4.

Swift & Co. Shows 36% Earnings Gain

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT).—The closing of marginal and money-losing units plus other operating efficiencies enabled Swift & Co. to lift earnings 36 percent to $21.57 million in the 53 weeks ended Nov. 1 from operating earnings of $15.83 million in the 52 weeks ended Oct. 31, 1968.

Robert W. Reneker, president of the largest U.S. meat processor, reported yesterday that earnings for fiscal 1969 equaled $1.60 a share, compared with $1.12 a share the year before. After an extraordinary charge of $57 million, the company had net loss of $41.18 million in fiscal 1968.

Sales and other revenues rose 5.7 percent to $3.1 billion from $2.93 billion the year before. Mr. Reneker said that, "on a broad basis, established 1969 goals have been met. We are encouraged with this progress."

Bangor Punta

Bangor Punta announced today a slide in net operating earnings for the year ended Sept. 30, to $6 million, or $1.44 a share, from the $7.3 million, $2.40 a share, of the year before. Revenues, however, jumped 37.5 percent to $330 million from the $240 million of fiscal 1968.

Results do not include operations of Piper Aircraft Corp.

After deducting non-recurring losses from the disposition of assets, principally the sale of the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad, the company expects net loss for 1969 of $8.6 million or $3.85 share.

Kaiser, AMC Sign An Agreement on Jeep Takeover

DETROIT, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—American Motors Corp. and Kaiser Industries say they have signed a previously-announced agreement for the purchase by American Motors of Kaiser Jeep Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Kaiser Industries.

The definitive agreement, which would give Kaiser a controlling interest in AMC, is subject to certain conditions including approval by AMC stockholders.

Terms of the sale include payment by American Motors to Kaiser of $10 million in cash, 5.5 million shares of AMC capital stock and about $9.5 million in AMC negotiable five-year notes plus about $500,000 in other assets.

Roy D. Chapin, AMC chairman, said that while Kaiser Industries will hold 20 to 22 percent of AMC stock, he has a verbal understanding with Edgar Kaiser that the West Coast firm will not try and move in.

EEC Sets Monetary Plans

isters should meet twice a year to coordinate policies, both in the monetary field and in related sectors such as foreign investment, patents, regional planning and employment.

The French president said the community not only should adopt common internal policies, but also should have a common front in the International Monetary Fund, the organization that manages a pool of $22 billion in gold and currencies of 112 nations.

It has been a long-held French view that the Washington-based institution is dominated by the United States and Britain.

While the French have been pressing for closer monetary cooperation ever since troubles began for the franc in May, 1968, the Germans, whose powerful economy leaves them open to paying the bills for other countries, have never been overly enthusiastic.

This is one reason why Mr. Brandt's declaration at the summit was considered important.

"My government is willing to proceed along the road to the economic and monetary union, step by step with a sober and realistic approach," he told the other leaders.

Japanese Firms Show Increases In Profits, Sales

TOKYO, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Kawasaki Steel Co. today declared an unchanged 10 percent dividend for the six months ended Oct. 31.

After-tax profit more than doubled, at $13.8 million, compared with $5.8 million in the same period last year on a 20 percent gain in gross sales to $493.49 million from the $412.61 million of a year ago.

Sony Repeats Dividend

Sony Corp. declared an unchanged 30 percent dividend for the six months ended Oct. 31.

After-tax profit increased 7 percent to $7.03 million from $6.55 million in the same period a year ago on gross sales of $148.41 million, up 28 percent from the $115.7 million total last year.

Toyo Kokyo Pays Same

Toyo Kokyo declared an unchanged 16 percent dividend for the fiscal year to Oct. 31.

Net profit edged to $14.12 million from the year before's $14.08 million and gross sales of $290.58 million were 3.6 percent ahead of the $280.4 million in fiscal 1968.

World Exports Rise 13%, IMF Reports

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP).—World exports in the third quarter of 1969 were at an estimated annual rate of $239 billion—up more than 13 percent from the third quarter of last year, according to the International Monetary Fund.

The just-released figure for the third quarter of this year was down slightly from the record $246 billion rate of the second quarter.

The totals were reported in the latest issue of International Financial Statistics, the IMF's monthly data publication.

For all industrial countries, third-quarter exports of $176.5 billion were down about 3.8 percent from the second quarter levels, the fund reported. Exports of industrial Europe as a group declined about 3.6 percent. British exports were virtually unchanged and U.S. exports were down about 10 percent. Japan's exports rose about 9 percent.

Other developed areas—including eight countries in Europe, plus Australia, New Zealand and South Africa—showed export gains of almost 4 percent to $15.8 billion, mainly a reflection of an increase in Australian exports, the fund said.

Exports of developing countries in Latin America, Asia and the Middle East were relatively stable at a $47 billion annual rate in the third quarter.

Total reserves of industrial countries—comprising gold and foreign exchange holdings, and reserve positions in the fund—declined to $56.54 billion in October from the record $57.56 billion at the end of September, the fund said.

"Most of the decline in October, like much of the rise in September, reflected changes in German foreign exchange holdings, which declined $1.487 billion in the latest month after rising $1.31 billion in September," the fund said. "Gold holdings and reserve positions in the fund were little changed."

GATT Reports

GENEVA, Dec. 2 (AP).—Exports of manufactured goods from the developing countries to the industrialized areas increased significantly through 1968 and are likely to show well in 1969, according to the annual report of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The report says that in the past decade, exports from the third world in general accelerated more than those from the advanced areas, largely due to the growing demand for petroleum, certain raw materials and, in particular, for ores to replace the output loss of depleting old deposits in the industrial countries.

Economic activity continued to grow rapidly in the first half of 1969 with a total industrial production volume in the industrial countries in the period 8 to 9 percent higher than the comparative period in 1968.

BRIDGE — By Alan Truscott

South had one of the relatively rare hands on which it is right to rebid a five-card suit. His suit was strong and there was no sensible alternative to rebidding it. North's good controls fully justified his second-round jump to game.

West led the spade four, hoping to cut down ruffs in the dummy, and East's jack was taken by the ace. South finessed in hearts, hoping to establish that suit, and East won with the king.

East led the diamond king. His aim was to cut South's communications with the dummy, even at the possible cost of giving up a diamond trick. This plan had merit, but the spade ten was available to the declarer as an alternative entry.

South took the diamond king with the ace and should have persisted with hearts. By using the spade ten as an entry, he would have been able to make five trump tricks, three hearts and two diamonds.

But the declarer did not know that the heart suit would break favorably and he was tempted by the prospect of ruffing clubs in dummy. He led a club to his king, losing to the ace. If West had played a trump at this point, South would have been forced back onto the winning heart track. Instead West returned the diamond nine, leaving South the temptation of club ruffs.

The declarer won with the diamond queen, ruffed a club, and attempted to return to his hand by ruffing a diamond with a low trump. This incautious move led to disaster when West overruffed and led his remaining trump. After all these vicissitudes, South was left with two club losers and was defeated by two tricks.

HARVARD: Through Change and Through Sto

By E. J. Kahn, jr. Norton. 333 pp. $7.50.

Reviewed by Jay Cantor

WHEN I was a kid I had a grown-up's book I loved, called "The World Beneath the City." It was all about the things that went on under the streets of New York. There was the story of a man who worked for the gas company, a champion at smelling out leaks with his especially long, extraordinarily sensitive nose. There were stories about the rats and occasional alligators who live in the sewers. It was all there. Anything you might want to know, and more. I loved the book for its tone of wide-eyed wonder. It had a kid's attitude toward the world, a fascination.

In one way the most appealing aspect of E.J. Kahn's book about Harvard is its childlike adulation of the place. Most of the interesting facts about Harvard are catalogued here—hell, all of them are. You can find out from Kahn where the Lowell House bells came from (a monastery near Moscow), read lots of anecdotes about John Kenneth Galbraith, and find out stuff about several present deans (which made me, for one, like them a lot more than I used to).

Sometimes, though, Kahn's book takes on a tone that is substantially less attractive. He becomes just a touch too knowing, too smug. He gives the feeling that nothing would surprise him, that anything at all (Louis Fieser inventing napalm; students protesting its use) could be assimilated into his chatty sophistication.

Perhaps this is the appropriate attitude for a book about Harvard University. A good education, a firm knowledge of facts, but no questioning at all of one's assumptions, one's place in the world. It is the attitude of a large part of Harvard: the rich preppies, the ones who know that there must be leaders and that they were born to lead; the ones who know that everything, school, family, country is just fine the way it is. After all it was all right for their great-grandparents when they were here. (It is however an attitude that the son of an immigrant could also adopt. And they do.) Like the Harvard ladies—as described in Kahn's book by the president of M.I.T.—the book is too often "tolerant and mildly superior."

The writing about student radicals and the events of last spring (the take-over of a university building, the police bust, the student strike) display the book's worst traits, snideness and smug inaccuracy. A McCarthy organizer gets transformed into a radical; the student demands are slighted or fudged: the radical leaders are made to sound like fools and paranoids.

I suppose that's inevitable. It is one thing to have a child-like fascination with the New York sewers, and quite when the subject is Harvard is an ex wealthy, very powerful corporation. Each year more than $50 million research for the Unite government. McGeorg is a former dean; Hi singer a former profes yard owns the most land in Cambridge an as it sees fit.

South Carolina, paced by junior Tom Owens, a 6-foot-10 forward who scored 27 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, hit on 59 percent of their shots and out-rebounded Auburn, 47-25.

The Gamecocks took control early and led by 9 points most of the way except for a brief spell early in the second half when Auburn got to within 49-44. Junior backcourt ace John Roche added 25 points and Bob Cremins had 15 in the Carolina attack. Bill Alexander had 26 for Auburn.

UCLA's new-look Bruins, running more with the graduation of three-time All-American Alcindor, the 7-foot-1 3-4 inch giant who led the West Coasters to three straight national titles, opened up a 19-point margin on Arizona after only ten minutes.

UCLA got 21 points from junior cornerman Sid Wicks and 15 from sophomore guard Henry Bibb. Steve Patterson, Alcindor's replacement, scored 12 points, but had a game-high 18 rebounds. Four field goals by Wicks helped UCLA to their 30-11 early margin.

Other top-ranked teams winning were No. 11 Duquesne, 123-55 over St. Vincent College; No. 13 Notre Dame, 84-75 over Minnesota; No. 18 Ohio State, nipping Wake Forest, 96-92, and No. 19 Drake topping Wisconsin State, 106-80, and Houston, No. 20, which beat Southwest Louisiana, 89-72.

Last season's scoring leader, Pete Maravich, scored 31 points in leading Louisiana State past Athletes in Action, 71-68.

Ellis Skips Frazier Fight Again

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Plans for a fight between Jimmy Ellis and Joe Frazier on Feb. 2 have fallen through.

Ellis is the World Boxing Association champion while Frazier is recognized as the titleholder by Mexico, Argentina and seven U.S. states. Cassius Clay is still recognized as champion by the authoritative Ring magazine.

Harry Markson, president of Madison Square Garden's boxing division, said last night that Ellis's manager, Angelo Dundee, had phoned him to say the February fight was off.

Dundee said Ellis had accepted a fight in Montevideo, Uruguay, on Dec. 20 with Argentinian boxer Gregorio Peralta—ranked sixth by the WBA. This left Ellis insufficient time to prepare for a Feb. 2 bout.

Markson said he had intended to announce the world title fight today. This was the second time Ellis had withdrawn from a title bout with Frazier. The first time was under similar circumstances last March.

After the announcement Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, said Ellis was "ducking a fight because he knows he will lose his title."

Dundee was quoted as saying that "if and when" Ellis faces Frazier he would like it to be in Miami Beach.

"I can't understand why Ellis would suddenly be a big attraction in Miami, since Dundee has never used him there in his entire career," said Markson. "On the other hand, he has fought with success in New York."

The Garden said that Dundee had agreed to accept $150,000 against 30 percent of all receipts.

Durham was furious over the second pullout.

"The fight was made. Joe has been training for it. Now we've got to break training. I think this should prove to everybody who the real world champion is," Durham said.

"We're not going to waste any more time with Ellis. I think the WBA should denounce him as their champion. In the meantime, I'm looking for another opponent."

But Not Much Caught in Draft

Baseball Trade Winds Heavy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Dec. 2 (AP).—The trade winds stirred anew today—with Mike Epstein, Felipe Alou and Rich Reichardt among the name players in the speculative vanguard—after a becalmed opening session of baseball's annual winter meetings.

The trade mart was at a standstill yesterday as club officials fenced for bargaining positions after breezing through the major league draft in 35 minutes—without turning up so much as a Bo Belinsky.

But action was expected to pick up briskly today, with most of the 24 teams admittedly seeking help before the Dec. 15 deadline for inter-league swapping. And Epstein, Alou and Reichardt reportedly were on the block.

The Washington Senators, hopeful of returning slugger Frank Howard from the outfield to first base in 1970, possibly would part with Epstein, a 30-home-run man last season, in a package deal for a second baseman and catcher.

Manager Ted Williams has served advance notice that the Senators might make a major trade "just to liven things up."

Alou, a top outfielder plagued by injuries in recent years, has been mentioned as a possible showcase attraction by the Atlanta Braves. The Braves are looking for pitching help, particularly a left-hander. The Angels are among several clubs who have expressed interest in Alou.

Messersmith Eyed

Many teams, including Baltimore's American League champs, covet California right-hander Andy Messersmith. But Reichardt, the former $200,000 bonus baby, appears to be the Angel most available. The recent acquisition of hard-hitting outfielder Alex Johnson from Cincinnati makes Reichardt expendable, if the Angels can get a No. 4 or 5 hitter in return.

The Cleveland Indians could be among the most active traders, with such as Tony Horton, Max Alvis and Larry Brown as bait for one or more proven pitchers.

The Indians, losingest team in the majors last season, got the first pick in the draft and selected southpaw Larry Staab, a 13-game winner for Los Angeles's Spokane farm club in the Pacific Coast League last season.

There were 19 players selected—15 in the first round—at a cost of $25,000 apiece in the major league phase of the draft. In contrast to last year's draft, when Belinsky—picked by St. Louis—was among several journeymen tabbed, the clubs apparently went for youth this time around.

Pitcher Jack DiLauro, taken off the roster of the New York Mets' Tidewater, Va., club in the International League by Houston, was possibly the most familiar name.

DiLauro, called up by the Mets from Tidewater last May, compiled a 1-4 record, mostly in relief, for the world champions but did not appear in either the National League playoffs or World Series.

Pitcher Jose Pena, picked by Los Angeles from the Cincinnati organization, catcher Don Bryant, chosen by Seattle, from Houston, and outfielder Tom Shopay, selected by Baltimore, from the Yankees, were the only other draftes who spent appreciable time in the majors during the 1969 season.

DiLauro and two others on the Tidewater list—outfielder Roy Foster and pitcher Jim Cosman—were lost by the Mets. Boston lost four players from its Louisville farm—second baseman Chris Krebs (Washington), catcher Hal King (Atlanta), and pitchers Ken Wright (Kansas City) and Mike Whitson (Washington).

Seven clubs, including the Mets, went into the session with frozen 40-man rosters and did not draft. Two others—Oakland and San Diego—had roster openings but also abstained.

In addition to the imminent trading, regular business at the week-long meetings, which shift to Miami tomorrow, includes discussion of restructuring the game's hierarchy, player relations and interleague play.

THE DRAFT SELECTIONS

Cleveland—Pitcher Larry Staab from Spokane, Pacific Coast League.

Montreal—Pitcher John Strohmayer from Des Moines, American Association.

Seattle—Outfielder Roy Foster from Tidewater, International League, and catcher Lon Bryant from Oklahoma City, Pacific Coast League.

Chicago White Sox—Pitcher Virle Rounsaville from Eugene, Pacific Coast League.

Kansas City—Second baseman Pat Locanto from Eugene, Pacific Coast League, and pitcher Vern Wright from Louisville, International League.

Houston—Pitcher Jack DiLauro from Tidewater, International League.

Washington—Second baseman Chris Krebs from Louisville, International League, and pitcher Mike Whitson from Louisville.

Boston—Infielder-outfielder Jim Derrick from Toledo, Internationaly League.

San Francisco-Catcher Mike Sadek from Denver, Pacific Coast League.

Chicago Cubs—Infielder-outfielder Cleo James from Spokane, Pacific Coast League and pitcher Jim Cosman from Tidewater, International League.

Minnesota—Pitcher John Haydel from Phoenix, Pacific Coast League.

Atlanta—Catcher Hal King from Louisville, International League.

Baltimore—Outfielder Tom Shopay from Syracuse, International League.

The Scoreboard

BOXING—At Bologna, Italy, European super-lightweight champion Bruno Arcari of Italy knocked out Spanish challenger José Luis Torcida in the fifth round of a scheduled 15-round title fight. The Italian fights world junior-welterweight champion Pedro Adigue of the Philippines in Italy next February. Dante Cane retained his Italian heavyweight title when the doctor stopped his fight against challenger Piero Tomasoni in the eighth round on the same card.

At Paris, Marcel Cerdan jr., son of the late world middleweight champion, continued unbeaten with a clear decision over countryman Lucien Fernandes. Fernandes took an eight count standing in the seventh round of the ten-round bout. The victory gave welterweight Cerdan, a record of 43 victories and one draw in 44 bouts. Fernandes has 22 victories, nine draws and 16 losses.

Struggling and scrambling, Palmer tottered through the last round for a 74, and even that was good enough to win by three strokes for his first victory in 15 months. His 72-hole total of 283 was the third highest winning score of 1969 and the only one in the field that wasn't over par.

Only nine players broke par in the first round. The man who knew the course best, Wallace Palmer, the home pro, had a 97. There were four under par after two rounds and three after the third.

"The toughest course we've played all year," said Jim Colbert.

"When it matures, it's going to be a great course," said Arnold Palmer.

It measures only 6,655 yards, but, as the Associated Press describes it, "It has snake-slim winding fairways, minuscule greens, vast expanses of water and sand, and thousands of trees."

By getting into cahoots with Dye, Nicklaus yielded to a temptation that grabs golfers the way heroin grips a junkie. Sure as barroom friendships lead to prison, the adult delinquent who spends his days bludgeoning a sitting ball sooner or later winds up designing golf courses.

Bobby Jones couldn't resist it. He helped lay out the Augusta National course where the Masters is played. Jimmy Demaret and Jackie Burke, though men of high moral character, had a hand in the construction of the Champions course in Houston where Orville Moody won the U.S. Open, and in the layout that is called The Monster up at the Concord in the Catskills.

It is a strange and aberrant compulsion. When a man visits the dentist he doesn't go home and start designing drills. He can buy a suit of clothes without thinking he is Bill Blass. But drive a hacker across a pasture on an electric cart and he'll tell you where the bunkers should be placed.

Probably the explanation is that the golfer is a masochist, or he'd never have taken up the game in the first place. Having let himself get hooked, he turns flagellant and builds courses designed to torture him as Harbour Town punished Nicklaus.

Now and then an exception is encountered. When Champagne Tony Lema was a gay and refreshing newcomer to the championship scene, he annoyed his manager, Fred Corcoran, by playing in a Philadelphia tournament when Fred thought he should be at St. Andrews practicing for the British Open.

"Let me tell you about St. Andrews," Fred said as their plane hummed over the Atlantic. "The course has been there since Mary Queen of Scots and men are still trying to learn how to play it. You haven't got a chance. You needed a week's practice, at least. Men have disappeared in Hell Bunker and never been found. You can spend a summer in the Principals Nose or the Valley of Sin."

"Mr. Corcoran," Tony said, "I don't build courses, I just play 'em."

The plane droned on. "Mr. Corcoran," Tony said, "do you mind if I have a couple more drinks?"

In Scotland he went directly from the airport to the course and played ten holes for practice. When play started the next day, he walked to the first tee, stooped and picked up a penny. "I'm the leading money winner already," he said, and handed the coin to Corcoran.

He shot 279, and won it all.

Nobis Reinjured, Out for Season

ATLANTA, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Atlanta Falcons' all-pro linebacker, Tommy Nobis, will sit out the rest of the season.

Nobis, who suffered a knee injury in the fourth game of the season with Dallas, was placed on the reserve list yesterday. He had not played for six weeks until returning to action in the National Football League game with Baltimore Sunday. He reinjured the knee in the second quarter.

A Falcon spokesman said it had not been determined whether Nobis would undergo surgery.

BRM '70 Team To Be Rodriguez, Oliver and Eaton

LONDON, Dec. 2 (UPI).—The British Racing Motors team for the 1970 Grand Prix season will have an international flavor, officials said today.

The three-man team will consist of Mexico's Pedro Rodriguez, Briton Jackie Oliver and Canadian George Eaton. The team will be managed by Tim Parnell, son of manager-driver Reg Parnell, who made his name with Aston Martin.

Oliver and Rodriguez have done exceptionally well in the Le Mans 24-hour sports car classic, while Eaton has been successful in the Can-Am series.

BRM's chief driver this year was former world driver champion John Surtees. He has yet to find a new team, but declined to continue with his old stable because of continual mechanical trouble and an under-powered engine which gave him little chance in championship events.

MGM Pays Surtees Libel Charges For Character in Film 'Grand Prix'

LONDON, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—Britain's former world motor racing champion John Surtees was today granted undisclosed damages for libel because the main character in the film "Grand Prix" was held to represent him.

In the 1967 picture, the private life of the main character, Jean-Pierre Sarti, leads to a dispute with Enzo Ferrari, chief of the Italian racing team, a high court judge heard today.

This aspect of the film embarrassed Surtees and his wife, Patricia, because Surtees did have a dispute with Ferrari and left his team in 1966.

But the row had nothing to do with Surtees's private life, the judge was told.

The film's makers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, are to pay Surtees damages for libel and he has agreed to allow "Grand Prix" to continue being shown, said the driver's lawyer.

A spokesman for MGM said the company had never intended to defame Surtees. He declined to name the amount of damages.

2 Skiers Injured

CERVINIA, Italy, Dec. 2 (UPI).—Two skiers training for the world Alpine championships suffered broken bones today in falls on the same strtch of the ski run. Italian Claudio De Tassis, 23, broke his right leg when one of his skis struck a rock and probably will miss the championships. Marko Kaucli, a 20-year-old member of the Yugoslav national team, broke a leg above the knee and dislocated his right shoulder in a fall 30 minutes later.

Springboks Play in Scotland, 50 Demonstrators Arrested

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Dec. 2 (AP).—The South African rugby union team battered North Scotland, 37-3, today, in a game interrupted three times by fights between police and anti-apartheid demonstrators.

The demonstrators swarmed on to the field at Aberdeen's Linksfield Stadium and lay down on the grass. More than 50 were arrested.

The first delay lasted seven minutes and was the longest in any game played so far by the Springboks on their controversial tour of Britain.

Police struggled to remove the protesters. Other demonstrators climbed the posts of one of the goals and stood on the crossbar, giving the Nazi salute a shouting, "Sieg Heil."

The two later interruptions were on a smaller scale. A policeman was hurt in one of the scuffles and was carried from the field on a stretcher.

Before the game, 1,000 persons marched through the city and staged a peaceful demonstration outside the stadium.

Gary Player Defies Threats

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—South African golf star Gary Player said last night he would continue competing in the United States despite Black Power threats that he would be physically attacked.

On Sunday, Prof Harry Edwards, a leader of the American Black Power sports movement, warned in a London television interview that Player had taken his last $100,000 out of the United States and would be attacked if he went back.

But the golf star said tonight: "If someone or some group want to beat me up because I am a South African, then they will just have to go ahead and beat me up because I am proud to be a South African."

Player added that he would like to be friends with everybody, but he knew this was not always possible.

Merckx to Skip 1970 Tour of Italy

VIENNA, Dec. 1 (AP).—Belgian bicycle ace and this year's Tour de France winner Eddie Merckx said yesterday that he would not start at the 1970 Giro d'Italia bicycle tour.

"The Tour de France yes, but not the Giro," Merckx said. He said that it was impossible to compete in these two races each year. He might do it again in two years, he said.

Merckx was disqualified this year from the Giro for allegedly using stimulants. He vehemently denied the charge.

Hole in One With Assist

BRIDGNORTH, England, Dec. 2 (AP).—Golfer John Long hit a hole in one on the rebound. The 11-handicap player sent the ball flying along the 178-yard fairway. It hit another golfer, Pat Sullivan, on the thigh as he stood on the green and dropped into the hole.

Pro Ski Circuit Set for Europe, North America

PARIS, Dec. 2 (Reuters).—The first European professional skiing circuit, to include seven competitions in Europe and the United States, will open in January.

The first competition, the Guy Périllat Cup, will be held in the French Alpine resort of La Clusaz, where perhaps 40 of the world's former the amateur skiers will fight for 58,800 francs ($10,584) prize money. Total prize money for the seven competitions could top half a million francs ($90,000).

Details were announced over the weekend by the organizers, who include France's former Olympic ace Guy Périllat.

Four more events would follow in Europe, including two in France and one at Verbier, Switzerland.

The last two competitions will be held in North America, the organisers added, at sites yet to be decided.

Among the skiers expected at La Clusaz are Périllat, Adrien Duvillard, Léo Lacroix and Louis Jauffret of France, Austrians Egon Zimmerman and Hias Leitner, Canadians Gilles Bourqui and Guy Brunet and Switzerland's Willy Favre and Adolf Mattis.

The last time a professional competition was organized in Europe was the world professional championships at Seefeld, Austria, in 1965. The resort was sanctioned by its national federation and prevented from staging amateur races for a year.

But Périllat said that he saw no reason why La Clusaz should run the same risk.

He admitted the circuit was only a beginning to professional skiing in Europe, but he foresaw the time when skiing, as with tennis, would become open. This view is shared by International Ski Federation president Marc Hodler.

Mars Recumbent

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. — With the new draft system we will eventually have an army in which everybody has the same birthday. Oh, not quite everybody, of course. In a force of 500,000 men—the present size of our Vietnam contingent—the entire group might have as many as nine or ten different birthdays.

It is not hard to see where we are headed under this system. Let us look ahead to 1971. President Nixon is being briefed by Prof. Kissinger for an imminent conference with the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"I simply don't understand, professor. I thought we had all agreed that 6:30 p.m. Tuesday was the ideal time to kick off Operation Monsoon. Now the Army wants me to reconsider?

"It seems, Mr. President, that in casting the origina charts for Operation Monsoon, the Air Force failed to take into account the fact that nearly 15 percent of our combat troops were born at a time when Mars was recumbent in Capricorn. An additional 40 percent turn out to have been born on dates when either Jupiter, Uranus or Pluto was rampant on a field of Sagittarius."

"Can you give it to me in English, Henry?"

"In short, Mr. President, for 55 percent of our combat forces, Tuesday is an extremely bad day to embark on new undertakings."

"Don't we have any troops at all that Tuesday is a good fighting day for?"

"We have 80,000 Leos, Mr. President, for whom Tuesday is a day when every endeavor, no matter how many, seems certain to be crowned with success. Unfortunately, they were all in last month's draft call and are, hence, concentrated in basic training camps in the United States."

"We'll have to take precautions against the press leaking their horoscope. If they find out about Tuesday, they may all pick that day to go over the hill. Just between us, professor, what is your personal opinion of Mme. Cagliostro?"

"The chairman of the Joint Chiefs? Do you have any reason to doubt her enthusiasm for pressing the war to an honorably negotiated conclusion, Mr. President?"

"I have a secret FBI horoscope on her. It quotes one of this country's most distinguished astrologers as saying that Venus was in conjunction with Hermes at the time of her birth. If true, this would mean that Mme. Cagliostro should give herself wholeheartedly to affairs of the heart during the next fortnight."

"All right, but we still have that sticky position paper from Army Astrology to deal with."

"Well, they're quite direct, Mr. President. They simply insist that they have to have 100,000 Scorpios if we're going to hold our own in Vietnam through 1972. Due to the luck of the draw, the manpower pipeline is crammed full of Geminis, for whom 1972 will be a futile year for aggressive activity. Scorpios would be perfect for 1972, but their birth dates are all at the bottom of this year's lottery list."

"Does the Army expect us to rig the lottery?"

"Of course they would never be that explicit, Mr. President. They have, however, sent over your own draft horoscope for 1972. They underline a passage which says, 'By the use of infinite c u n n i n g, you may triumph over terrible adversity in the coming year.'"

"Well, Henry, I'm not going to waste any of my cunning rigging the draft. I'll need all of it to get re-elected next year. Do you have the Joint Chiefs' horoscope outlook for the war in the coming year?"

"I have, sir. It says..."

"I know what it says. 'We will turn the corner in 1972 and see light at the end of the tunnel.' One of my great disappointments as President has been finding that astrologers tell us the same thing about Vietnam as generals."

"That's the way it goes, Mr. President. Aries descends and Orion sits in the House of Atreus."

"Same to you, Henry. Don't get caught out in any full moons."

"The intellectuals in America. . .tend to be emptily rebellious. . .and enjoy their revolutionary passions against a background of institutional safety."

Saul Bellow and the U.S.

By Israel Shenker

CHICAGO (NYT).—Elementary wisdom sometimes dictates unpleasant conclusions to the novelist Saul Bellow—that the species is mad, or that we are harried by the unworthy, or that we deserve no better fate. But he is in favor of seeking wisdom.

"Naïveté, for intellectuals, should be a punishable offense," he said in a recent interview here.

Bellow has just completed an exercise in the distinction between wisdom and knowledge, and this novel—"Mr. Sammler's Planet"—will be published Jan. 30.

Mr. Sammler is an aged intellectual, a refugee from Nazism, and the book is an account of his wisdom and despair. The narrative melts back and forth between past and present horrors, and conveys the author's own distress. On the planetary level Bellow sees dangers, and on the national stage he is unhappy about the cast.

"American intellectuals don't enter government service very willingly," Bellow said, "and they look on government as a cold-blooded monster. They're separatist and radical by education, and feel they're serving higher ideals—to resist, to stand outside. States are distrusted, establishments attacked, and there's plenty of reason to do both. Academics, poets, painters have always been considered females in this culture of virility, and occasionally have sought masculinity by sharing power.

Standing Aside

"Intellectuals have gone by fits and starts—alienated by power or moving toward it gingerly. Certain intellectuals should aspire to public service, but there should always be a class of intellectuals who stand aside. I don't think writers or philosophers should associate themselves with state power, or allow the state to use them as ornaments."

Bellow teaches literature to graduate students at the University of Chicago, in a program called "Committee on Social Thought." Since he himself is interested in a great range of thinkers, his students hear about Melville one day, Baudelaire the next. In between, Bellow discusses his manuscripts with colleagues, reads theirs, and wonders about the fate of man. He lives in an apartment near the university—no name or number on the door—and cherishes his independence.

"As I look around," he said, in a characteristic meltback, "I see that the intellectuals in America who have no tradition of holding public office tend to be emptily rebellious and don't discuss the main questions: should the government have the power to tax, to raise armies, to draft, to judge and to imprison?

"I think it's because they're hedonists and really enjoy their revolutionary passions against a background of institutional safety. They can endorse the Black Panthers without having to take chances in a society which has, not Panthers running amok, but mobs in the street and revolution. So they seek to appease black militants at the expense of the working and middle classes, and at no cost to themselves.

One Activity: Business

"Intellectuals have to have some respect for truth and a distress at ignorance in excess. Somehow I feel that truth is very attractive to a tremendous number of people."

Bellow complained that the state was not concerned with truth or beauty—and recognized only one form of activity: business. Its tax laws benefit business, he said, and its subsidies support it. The life of a private citizen is seen as a business undertaking—he's a bookkeeper, he has records; there is no art, science, history, literature, philosophy.

When he looks at Washington, he detects the pervasive triumph of business, and he summed up the administration as "New England small tradesmen or military hardware buyers."

"I find it sad that American society should be led by people of such negligible quality," he said. "They don't speak to our hearts and souls ever. They're ignorant, crafty, make petty calculations, and are unable to rise imaginatively to the challenge of history. Some of them are Yahoos. I don't demand that they should be men of culture like Winston Churchill or Charles de Gaulle, but one sees what one sees."

He also sees how difficult it is to improve the breed. "Politics is absorbing and it totally consumes its devotees and votaries," Bellow said. "If they haven't acquired an education before they take office, there's no time for them to do it afterward. How could Mayor (Richard J.) Daley or L.B.J. read the poems of Wallace Stevens even if they were inclined to do it? The people who are so inclined, like Eugene McCarthy, make torpid politicians."

Bellow's own response is to write thoughtful books—and to hope there is a point in preaching his message. "Even the converted are riding stormy waters," he suggested, "and need signals and need to know."
